Hitler's Retreat Becoming a Rout

DISTURBANCES ARE REPORTED IN GERMANY

Swedish Rumors Say That a State of Emergency Has Been Imposed In Berlin

FIFTH ARMY ADVANCING

BY RICHARD McMURRAY
Associated Press War Editor

The German army, losing a fight for its very life in South Russia, reeled back in disordered retreat today to within 120 airline miles of Rumania as tenuous Swedish reports told of serious disturbances in Germany and the imposition of a state of emergency in Berlin and other cities.

The Crimea was bypassed and left far behind. Cossacks seized Skadovsk on the Black Sea, while the Red army was near Rumania and only 104 direct miles from Odessa. The Soviets were but 65 miles from Nikolaev at the mouth of the Bug river, toward which the beaten Germans apparently were retreating.

The Russian communique suggested the retreat was becoming a rout. It spoke in these terms: Enormous losses, several thousands Nazis drowned in the Dnieper at recaptured Kakhovka, large booty, large numbers of prisoners, surrounded enemy units completely annihilated.

The Germans still were counter-attacking at Krivoi Rog to hold open escape routes from the Dnieper bend. Within the Crimea, the situation was vague. Far to the north where the terrible Russian winter has started plains of ice and snow, the Russians said they captured a height of great importance near Vitebsk.

Reports of disorders inside Germany were printed in the Svenska Dagbladet of Stockholm, quoting travelers reaching Malmoe from Denmark. Stories of German unrest started circulating in Sweden a month ago; the Moscow conference was calculated by the Allies to stagged German morale further by ending any Hitlerian hope to divide and conquer. The Swedes said rigorous police control had been tightened through Germany. Austria was a focal point and Himmler was said to have reinforced his guards there.

Slow and painful advances were made by Allied armies in Central Italy. The American Fifth captured Pratella and Gallo, nine miles below the key German road center of Isernia, and continued their advance despite Nazi opposition, hardened by tanks. The Eighth Army bridged the Trigno river anew near the Adriatic and worked on the Germans with cannon. Enemy resistance pockets were reduced.

Civitavecchia, north of Rome, Aquila and Ancona on the Adriatic were bombed. The latter city was said by the Swiss "no longer to exist."

Lt. Gen. Carl Spaatz' new whipsay 15th U. S. airforce announced the destruction of at least 30 German planes yesterday in its initial raid on the Messerschmitt plane works at Wiener Neustadt, 27 miles south of Vienna. The formation of the 15th meant the number of bombers at Italian bases had been increased greatly; that Spaatz was ready to match aerial blows at Germany with the 8th Air Force based in Britain. Weather will favor Spaatz.

SHEFFIELD YOUTH LOSES LIFE IN HIGHWAY CRASH

James Richard Anderson, 17, Dies at Hospital of Fractured Skull Soon After Accident

DRIVER SLIGHTLY HURT

James Richard Anderson, 17, 405 Radeker street, Sheffield died in the Warren General Hospital last night at 11:30 of injuries sustained in an automobile crash at Stoneham at 6:30 last evening. Gregory Gilotti, 28, of Oak Street, Kane, also in the accident was given emergency treatment at the hospital for head cuts and bruises about the chest.

Anderson was hitch-hiking to Warren to bid farewell to a young soldier who was leaving on the eastbound evening train and had been picked up at Sheffield by the Kane man. At Stoneham the Chevrolet sedan driven by Gilotti struck a parked truck. The truck loaded with coal was driven by Wylie Helm, 25, of Saybrook and he had stopped to act as a good Samaritan to a dog that had been struck by a car. The car which had hit the dog had failed to stop and Helm stopped his truck with two wheels off the pavement and went to give aid to the dog.

Gilotti in telling his story of the accident to the State Police, who investigated the affair, said he was driving along at a fair rate of speed and did not see the parked truck until within about 30 feet of it. Another car was approaching and he could not pass the truck. Applying his brakes at attempted to stop but could not do so and the crash followed.

Anderson was brought to the hospital in an ambulance and was given treatment. He had a fracture of the skull back of the left ear, a basic fracture of the skull and suffered severe hemorrhages.

The Chevrolet sedan which Gilotti was driving was badly damaged on the left side and the front of the car was badly twisted and torn and the damage is estimated at $300. The big International coal truck, loaded with coal, had the frame spring and an axle bent.

The body of the young man who died was removed to the Lutz Funeral home.

Coroner Ed C. Lowrey gave permission to move the body to the undetraking rooms and joined the state police in the investigation.

James Richard Anderson was born in Warren 17 years ago, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Axel An-

Unofficial Tally Shows Hanna Victor In Contest for County Commissioners on Dem. Ticket

Warren county on Tuesday experienced perhaps the most quiet election in its history. The vote cast was light, as most of the primary results had settled contests for the majority of the offices in the county. Only the Democratic commissioner fight won any special attention in the balloting. William Olney, the present incumbent, was opposed by John O. Hanna and both had waged a vigorous campaign. Unofficial returns indicate Hanna's nomination by 129 votes.

The weather yesterday, coupled with the lack of interest in the result, sent but a small fraction of the voters to the polls. At the Times-Mirror office, where returns were received, so little interest was evinced and so few inquiries were received that the office was closed early in the evening.

Results today indicate that, as usual, the GOP vote dominated the county results and unofficial totals for the various offices are as follows:

800 Italians Held By Nazis Are Set Free

London, Nov. 3—(AP)—Eight hundred Italians held by the Germans have been freed from a prison camp by Yugoslav partisan troops in the course of heavy fighting in Montenegro, Gen. Josip (Tito) Broz' Free Yugoslav radio said today.

The communique also told of continued fighting with Gen. Draja Mihailovic's forces in Serbia in which a Chetnic commander was said to have been killed.

German attacks aimed at Tuzla in eastern Bosnia were declared to have been repulsed, while Nazi forces were also said to have been beaten back with heavy losses in a futile attempt to capture Breznica in Croatia. The communique also claimed unspecified successes against the Germans in Dalmatia and the Croatian province of Lika.

"Allied aviation" was credited in the communique with attacks on the German-held port of Ploce and Metkovic and German positions on the Pelyesac peninsula between Split and Dubrovnik.

Japanese Hint At Showdown For Rabaul

Niponnese Sea Force Is Intercepted and Forced To Turn Back

REPORTS ARE AWAITED

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters, Nov. 3—(AP)—The Japanese, whose Bougainville air bases were paralyzed by naval guns and plane bombs as the Allies invaded that last big Solomons Island of the enemy, already have hinted at naval and air battles to come in the showdown struggle before Rabaul.

General MacArthur's headquarters said today that, after the marines stormed ashore on Bougainville's west coast Monday at dawn to capture Empress Augusta Bay, a Japanese cruiser and destroyer force was intercepted Monday night, fought and turned back by Allied warships before they could reach the invasion scene.

Headquarters added that complete reports were awaited on the battle which might go far toward determining the ability of the Allied landing force to control Bougainville's west coast.

It was also disclosed that, after the naval battle, Japanese planes attacked the Allied warships and caused minor damage before they

COAL DIGGERS UNHEED PLEA OF PRESIDENT

WORKERS SKEPTICAL

By the Associated Press

Washington, Nov. 3—President Roosevelt's directive to the nation's coal miners to return today to their jobs in the struck workings, now under government-seizure, was generally ignored in the major producing states this morning.

The quiet suspension of activity, began two weeks ago in scattered wildcat walkouts stemming from continued absence of a working contract, spread to an estimated 460,000 hard and soft coal miners as conferences looking to some settlement went forward here between United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis and Interior Secretary Ickes, again designated as federal overseer of the pits.

An early morning survey in Pennsylvania, a top producer of both anthracite and bituminous coal, showed no signs of a back to work movement in response to the president's appeal. Only a few soft coal strip mines were reported working in western Pennsylvania, but Byron H. Canon, executive secretary of the Operators' Association, suggested the failure of general resumptions to develop might be due in part to delays in receipt of formal notices of government seizure.

In West Virginia, there were no early reports of any mine crews going back to the pits in 600 commercial operations, although a few non-union mines and some strip mines were turning out some small amounts of coal. A Logan county union spokesman said 10 county locals had sent telegrams to President Roosevelt, Lewis and the War Labor Board stating they

SEVEN COMMUNITIES FAVOR SUNDAY MOVIES

Philadelphia, Nov. 3—(AP)—Seven municipalities in Pennsylvania voted in favor of Sunday movies and one decided to continue the ban on them.

Greenville, in Mercer county, which now prohibits Sunday shows, voted against opening theatres on the Sabbath.

Voting in favor of Sunday performances were Laureldale, Berks county; Wyalusing and Athens, Bradford count; Monroe township, Cumberland county; Carmichaels, Greene county; Boswell, Somerset county, and Port Carbon, Schuylkill county.

All except Port Carbon now prohibit Sunday shows.

Mild Interest Is Indicated In Amendment

Philadelphia, Nov. 3—(AP)—A proposed amendment to the state constitution giving the legislature power to set up uniform machinery to fix election district boundaries received a substantial majority in a cross-section tabulation today of the state-wide vote cast in yesterday's election.

The vote in 3839 of 8192 precincts in the state was 83,447 for the amendment and 71,733 against it. The tabulation contained 466 of Allegheny's 1017 precincts.

The amendment was carried on a separate ballot and the vote on it was uniformly smaller than that cast for major party candidates. In some counties, including Philadelphia, no unofficial tabulation of the amendment vote was made.

Other counties from which the vote was unreported included, Beaver, Chester, Columbia, Delaware, Fayette, Indiana, Jefferson, Mercer Montour Somerset, Warren and Washington.

The amendment was backed by the general assembly's Local Government Commission. The present constitution gives election district boundary fixing power to county courts.

Oakes' Widow Testifies In Bahamas Trial

Lady Eunice Tells of Break In Family After Marriage of Daughter

A DRAMATIC RECITAL

By E. V. W. JONES

Nassau, Bahamas, Nov. 3—(AP)—In the silence of a crowded courtroom gripped by the drama of the moment, the widow of Sir Harry Oakes told in tones sometimes halting, sometimes firm today of a family break which followed Alfred De Marginy's marriage to the daughter of the man he now is accused of killing.

Even the red-robed, white-wigged chief justice dropped his voice while Lady Eunice Oakes testified in the Bahamas supreme court against her dashing, twice-divorced son-in-law, who is charged with bludgeoning and burning the multi-millionaire Sir Harry to death last July.

"We tried to make the best of a bad situation," the mourning-clad broken woman said, after the handsome defendant married red-haired Nancy Oakes, then 18 years old.

But Nancy became pregnant even before she recovered from a near-fatal attack of typhoid fever. Lady Oakes related and Sir Harry's resentment caused ill feeling between the Baronet and De Marigny.

She said that Nancy stuck with her husband and moved away from her family.

Then, and the witness' voice now was firm and cold, De Marigny even wrote to the eldest Oakes' son, Sir Sidney, "the most diabolical letter a man could write to a child of 15 about his parents."

As a result of the bitter feeling, said the widow, who remained dry-eyed until the very end of her testimony, "we both changed our wills in February to protect the children against themselves until their arrival at the state of discretion."

Preference to Keep Judges Is Revealed

Philadelphia, Nov. 3—(AP)—Voters of Pennsylvania showed a preference to keep judges for another term, returns from yesterday's election showed today.

Thirty-one judges were re-elected 27 of them with endorsement of both major parties. Judges are the only candidates who may run on more than one ticket in the state.

Where there were contests, Republicans won four judicial posts and the Democrats three. Each party re-elected two judges over opposition.

A Democrat judge, W. Wallace Smith, of Clearfield, was defeated. The voters elected F. Cortz Bell, Republican, to succeed him.

Others of the 48 county judgeships at stake were undecided.

Democrats Beaten In New York, New Jersey and Penn'a

Acting Mayor Samuel of Philadelphia Is Elected To Regular Term Over Former Ambassador to Russia, William Bullitt

VOTING IN SEVEN STATES HEAVIER THAN EXPECTED

By the Associated Press

Triumphant in key eastern seaboard contests, Republicans viewed the off-year election returns today as a signpost on the road which they hope will lead back to the White House in 1944.

Voting, heavier than expected in seven states in view of the absentees—in uniform and in war factories—yielded these results:

New York—Republican Joe R. Hanley was elected lieutenant governor over Democrat William N. Haskell, retired lieutenant general, by more than 300,000 majority. Governor Thomas E. Dewey and Wendell Willkie actively supported Hanley; President Roosevelt and James E. Farley backed Haskell, although the president's support was confined to a vote cast at his Hyde Park home.

New Jersey.—Former Senator Walter Edge, Republican, defeated Vincent J. Murphy, Newark's Democratic mayor for the governorship despite a better than 100,000 majority for Murphy piled up in the Hague-dominated Jersey City area.

Pennsylvania — Acting Mayor Bernard Samuel of Philadelphia, Republican, was elected to a regular term in that office over the Democratic candidate, William C. Bullitt, formen ambassador to Russia and to France, for whom President Roosevelt had spoken a good word. The state continued Republican.

Kentucky—This normally Democratic state produced a real horse race for governor with Republican Simeon Willis trailing Democrat J. Lyter Donaldson by only a few thousand votes with hundreds of districts uncounted.

Harrison Spangler, Republican national chairman, saw in these returns a death blow to any fourth term movement for Mr. Roosevelt. State after state, he declared, has "rebuffed the new deal."

Hanley's majority in the New York contest—far greater than Dewey himself was able to pile up last year against a split field—was considered a more than ordinary tribute to the governor. The Republicans fought the campaign on Dewey's record as executive.

Dewey's organization got in some surprising licks in New York City where the governor first made his name as a racket-busting prosecutor. The Democrats carried the city as usual but only by a fraction of the majority they generally hurl against the upstate Republican vote.

Edge's election in New Jersey gives the G. O. P. a majority of the governorships for the first time since 1928. With his inauguration in January, the party will have 25 of the 48 state executives. This would put the Republicans in control of every populous state outside the "solid south" except Indiana.

New England also yielded some interesting mayoral campaigns. For the first time since 1933 Hartford, Conn., elected a republican mayor, William H. Mortensen. Bridgeport gave Socialist Jasper McLevy his sixth term.

Taylor Claims Victories In 50 of State's 67 Counties

Philadelphia, Nov. 3—(AP)—Republicans tightened their 62-year grip on Philadelphia's municipal affairs today, beating off a Democratic challenge by William C. Bullitt, who ran with the approval of the White House, by electing Bernard Samuel to a four-year term as mayor.

With only five districts missing, the vote was: Bullitt, 278,906; Samuel, 342,388; Julius C. Abercauph, Independent, 4,212.

The size of Samuel's plurality exceeded the most optimistic predictions of his backers. Democratic hopes had been built upon an apparent weakening of the Republican machine last year, when the G.O.P. carried the city by only 157 votes in a gubernatorial election.

President Roosevelt came to the defense of Bullitt, former U. S. ambassador to Russia and France, in the closing stages of the campaign, characterizing pamphlets criticizing the Democratic candidate's diplomatic record as "a mass of falsehoods."

Samuel hailed the result as a triumph for "home rule." He said the voters had "served notice that they are capable of selecting municipal officers without outside assistance."

In conceding defeat Bullitt said he was sorry he lost because "I consider the issues involved vital to the welfare of our people."

Abercauph, Voters League candidate, said "Philadelphia has made it clear that it wants no Munich man in office."

Victories in local contests in 50 of the state's 67 counties were claimed for the Republicans by their state chairman, M. Harvey Taylor, who said the returns "indicate what is going to happen next year and good Democrats better get out of the way."

In Allegheny county (Pittsburgh), however, the Democrats rolled up their usual pluralities, smashing hopes of Republicans to capture several county posts.

Republicans apparently retained the congressional seat of Rep. James E. Van Zandt, who resigned to enter the navy. The vote in 171 of the 23d District's 288 precincts gave: D. Emmert Brumbaugh, Republican, 16,223; Miss Edna Marsden, Democrat, 11,640.

In Pennsylvania's only statewide election, Judge Claude T. Reno was elected to a full 10-year term on the superior court bench, to which he was appointed a year ago.

With 6,081 precincts out of 8,192 reporting, Reno led his Democratic opponent, Common Pleas Judge Curtis Bok of Philadelphia, 958,816 to 722,026.

Incomplete returns indicated approval of a proposed constitutional amendment empowering the state legislature, rather than the county courts, to fix election district boundaries.

27 Cities In State Choose New Mayors

Philadelphia, Nov. 3.—(AP)—Republicans elected 20 mayors of third class cities to the Democrats' five in yesterday's municipal elections.

The returns today also returned Socialist J. Henry Stump at the head of Reading's city government.

One contest of the 27 mayoralty races remained in doubt. At Easton Mayor Joseph Morrison, Democrat, and Russell J. Morrison, Republican, were running neck and neck. They are no relation.

Twelve Republican mayors and four Democratic chief executives were re-elected.

The voters' ax fell on four Democratic executives and one Republican.

Among mayors elected were: (x—incumbent.)

DuBois—x-William L. Hoover, Rep.

Erie—x-Charles Barber, Rep.

New Castle—John F. Haven, Rep.

Oil City—x-John G. Payne, Rep.

U. S. S. Lafayette Towed to Drydock

New York, Nov. 3—(AP)—The former French liner Normandie, now the U. S. S. Lafayette, was moved from its North River pier at the foot of 48th street today for the first time since the war began.

A swarm of tugboats pulled the giant 83,000-ton hulk to a drydock where it will be fitted out for naval service.

The removal climaxed more than a year of salvage work by hundreds of men since the ship was swept by fire and capsized at her pier on February 6, 1942 while being converted for military service.

Aboard the vessel when the last line was cut loose at 10:10 a. m., were 200 civilian employes of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, 90 Coast Guardsmen, 25 salvage men and several naval officials.

As the ship moved downstream, one line to a tugboat snapped, but this did not impede the craft's movement, as 19 other tugs were pulling

Many Problems Face Allies on Dealing With Axis After War

By FLORA LEWS

Washington, Nov. 3—(AP)—Complete long-term military occupation of Germany and destruction of all major German armaments industries after the war were among the possibilities mentioned in speculation here today on what was decided at the Moscow conference.

It is known that the United States delegation favored a plan to occupy all the larger cities in Germany and to paralyze the German war potential.

How far the foreign ministers reached definite agreement on those points has not been disclosed, but the communique issued at the conclusion of their meeting said the question of Germany's future had been taken up.

Main problems facing the Allies on how to deal with Germany after the surrender are:

1. When to deal with and whether to allow the continuance of any German government.

2. How to divide up the responsibility of occupation.

Partitioning Germany into zones of Russian, British, American and other Allied occupation spheres has been suggested, but the United States view, it was learned, is that the matter should be handled by an Allied commander-in-chief, perhaps under a joint commission.

Establishment of the advisory council to deal with Italy set a pattern for the type of committee which may be formed for Germany. It was announced at Moscow that those questions which were not finally decided were referred to commissions created to study them.

Adams Only G.O.P. Winner In Allegheny Co. Contests

Pittsburgh, Nov. 3—(AP)—District Attorney Russell H. Adams, Republican, was relected in a late upsurge of ballots from outlying Alegheny county precincts today on the basis of nearly complete returns from yesterday's voting in which the county board of commissioners was also re-elected.

Returns from 991 precincts out of 1017 precincts gave Adams 185,909 votes compared to 178,474 for John Fremont Cox.

In contrast to Republican victories in most other western Pennsylvania counties, the Democrats of Allegheny were successful in nearly all of the other county contests.

The Democrat commissioners, John J. Kane, and George Rankin, Jr., got a smashing majority, and the Republicans accorded the party nominee, John S. Herron, a substantial lead over Sheriff Robert J. Corbett, Republican, for the third seat on the board.

In the district attorneyship race Adams appeared to be a beaten man when the city of Pittsburgh gave his Democratic opponent, State Senator John Fremont Cox, a majority of 17,000 last night, but the incumbent took the lead today as votes poured in from the boroughs and townships.

In the county commissionership contest, only the size of the Democratic majority remained to be decided once the votes started to come in.

Democrats swept most of the judiciary contests in the balloting, apparently toppling two sitting judges who were seeking re-election on the Republican ticket—Orphans Judge James Milholland and County Judge Roy T. Clunk. The Democrats also swept all their incumbent Pittsburgh city officials into office.

Final audited results will be somewhere between $92,000 and $93,000; largest amount raised in any Warren county campaign in more than a quarter of a century.

TARENTUM PAPER FREEZES CIRCULATION
Tarentum, Pa., Nov. 3—(AP)—Because of the newsprint shortage the Valley Daily News has frozen its circulation at the present figure and notified contract advertisers their lineage this year must not exceed that of last year.

In a front-page statement announcing the move, the paper said it would "continue serve all present subscribers." New subscriptions will be accepted on a priority basis, and non-contract advertising will be accepted as space permits, the announcement said.

Just SCRAPS

It's a dark lowering morning. To the South the clouds hang low over the nearest hills, so that their tops are obscured and almost invisible. At 10 a. m. it is as dark as night, and lights are turned on in the stores. A thin drizzle of rain lies like a veil over the valley. To the west, mean and angry clouds are rolling toward the town. A threatening wind has arisen and it may be we are about to have one of those rare but very violent windstorms. Perhaps this is the final bow of the departing Autumn, and by tomorrow winter may be upon us with a lash and a snarl, and with those muscular arms full snow and sleet. Such is our valley on the morning of November 2, 1943.

✣ ✣ ✣ ✣ ✣

But, no matter what the weather, no matter how bleak the skies, the war must go on; and Warren county's part in that war must go on as well. Across the iron bridge, nosing its way through the mist and semi-darkness of this strange morning, a freight train is puffing eastward. Perhaps it contains products manufactured by Warren county plants for the war machine. Perhaps it contains scrap metal or other salvage items. Not for one minute can this county, or any county in these wide United States, relax its effort to keep the fires roaring in the nation's foundries; to keep the scrap moving from farm to town, from town to freight car, from freight car to factory. It is as simple as all that, but it must not stop; it must not even pause.

✣ ✣ ✣ ✣ ✣

Have you seen the display window in the Pennsylvania Electric Company devoted to the Salvage program and to this phase of Warren county's part in the war? This window has been created through the efforts of Fire Chief Kropf, who is always willing to give up his time to war projects, and W. T. Corbett, chairman of the County Salvage Committee. Chief Kropf, incidentally, is one of only seven men in Warren county who has received the insignia of the State Council of Defense indicating that he has given 3,000 hours of work to the war effort. W. T. Corbett is another one of those seven key men.

The window contains samples of each kind of salvage material. It contains also samples of the many kinds of war-related materials made in the county: 37 mm gun barrel, 37 mm shells, engine cuppler, gears for various kinds of war equipment, and similar items. This display is very much worth your while; you should see it.

On Thursday of last week at the Pleasant Grange, Pleasant Township, went all-out on a chicken dinner with 80 guests. This active community, just on the outskirts of Warren, is always upmost in any phase of war activity. Glen Kiser, leader of this group, presided over the long tables garnished with Hallowe'en decorations. W. T. Corbett spoke on the salvage activities and needs in Warren county, and presented Mr. Kiser with the prized service insignia of the State Council for 500 hours of volunteer work.

M. H. Hetrick of the Pittsburgh branch of the U. S. Army Ordnance Department gave an interesting outline of the activities of the Department and the need for all types of salvage. Miss Dale Holcomb sang two pleasing solos, and two reels of war pictures were shown. The after-dinner meeting was attended by about 125 people.

"PERFUME" FOUND IN SEA
Ambergris, valuable component of some perfumes, is a waxy concentration formed by indigestion, in the intestine of the sperm whale. It is most frequently found floating in the sea or tossed up on the beaches and thus is believed to have been vomited by the ailing whale.

Milk Producers Can Get Payment

Warren County milk producers who wish to receive payments under the Dairy Feed Payment Program should save evidence of milk and butterfat sales for presentation in applying for such payments, according to W. L. Armitage, Chairman of the County AAA Committee. The rate of payment for Pennsylvania dairy producers will be 40 cents per hundredweight for whole milk deliveries and 5 cents per pound of butterfat sold in cream and butter. The butterfat test or the utilization of the milk will not affect the payment for whole milk delivered.

Application for payment on October milk deliveries should be made to the County AAA Committee betwween November 1 and 30. Locations throughout the County, convenient for the producer to make application for the dairy feed adjustment payment will be announced later.

CIGARETTES SCARCE

During the past few days there have been times when certain brands of cigarettes could not be bought in Warren which had led many to ask, "are we in for a nation-wide cigarette famine?" The current shortage should be temporary, according to expert opinion, but next year's prospects are not so reassuring. Factors contributing to the stringency are: 1—panic buying; 2—enormous orders for overseas Christmas presents; 3—"Big Five" manufacturers placing jobbers on a quota basis. Then, too, fifty billion more cigarettes have been smoked this year than can be rolled from the 1945 tobacco crop.

They have carefully checked all of the papers relative to their free use of space in advertising the loans. The Advertising Checking Bureau has compiled the figures and it shows that in the Second War Loan the Times-Mirror had 16,037 inches of space worth $801.85 and in the Third Loan drive 14,424 inches of space were used worth $721.20. In all approximately 118,000,000 inches of advertising was run by the newspapers of the nation.

DYNAFUEL

is Sunoco's great contribution to United Nations' mastery of the skies

50% more powerful than U. S. standard 100-octane test fuel

It's not by chance that United Nations' fliers have won such complete mastery of the air. Our men are better trained—their planes are better armed—aiming devices and bombsights are unexcelled.

But another factor of tremendous importance is the fighting fuel that powers our planes. Every week, millions of gallons of high-octane aviation fuel flow from Sunoco refineries to the battlefronts of the world.

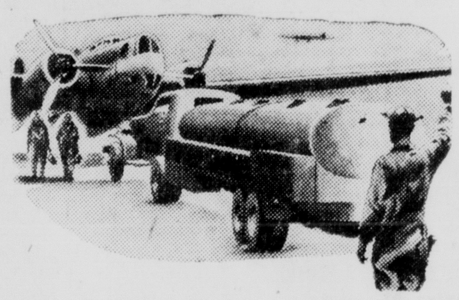
The high quality as well as the huge quantity of our output has been made possible largely by Dynafuel—an exclusive development of Sunoco engineers and chemists.

What is Dynafuel?

Dynafuel is more than a gasoline. It is a super aviation fuel concentrate, made entirely from petroleum and specially processed in order to produce the greatest possible power.

What Makes Dynafuel so Powerful?

It contains a larger percentage of certain ingredients which have extraordinary power-producing qualities. That is why Dynafuel tests 50% higher in power than U. S. standard 100-octane test fuel.



Do Our Fighters and Bombers Fly on Pure Dynafuel?

No—Sunoco Dynafuel is never used undiluted but is blended with gasolines that are produced by other methods, in order to step up their quality.

Thereby, Dynafuel also helps make available greater quantities of aviation fuel that meets highest military specifications—the high-octane fuel which enables the fighters and bombers of the United Nations to fly faster, range farther, climb higher than ever before, and to carry heavier loads of bombs.

Is Dynafuel Being Produced in Large Quantities Now?

Yes—the Dynafuel Process is an important factor in Sunoco's huge production of 100-octane aviation fuel; it utilizes even those portions of the crude which formerly went only into low-grade fuels.

Will Dynafuel Be Available for Automobiles?

Right now, every drop of Dynafuel is reserved for military use. But when peace comes, the same processes and equipment which have contributed so greatly to the war will bring to motorists a new, more powerful fuel for their automobiles.

Dynafuel was developed by Sunoco without government aid or subsidy. The company risked its own capital, its own credit, in order to pay the huge costs of building the plants for its production.

It is through such free play of private initiative that all American progress has been achieved.

Mark Clark—Man of Invasions

LEAN, 6-foot-2-inch Mark Wayne Clark, currently conquering Italy with his U. S. Fifth Army, augmented by British, Canadians, and French, is at 47 the youngest lieutenant-general in American Service. Born at a New York Army post, the Army has been his life, his disciplinarian personality. But war has made him spectacular. In 1940 he was a lieutenant-colonel; his present rank represents four of the hardest kinds of promotions higher. In the spring of 1942 General Eisenhower called him to England to command all ground forces in the European theater. That autumn the Americans were ready to move. So Clark led a group of other daring officers on that most amazing of Odysseys in modern military history—the secret plane-auto-submarine-small boat-foot mission to enemy-held North Africa to plot the American invasion with French General Giraud's staff. The exploit is credited with saving thousands of American lives by obtaining information and promise of only a token resistance. Clark lost $18,000 in gold when his boat capsized, but he captured the three stars of a lieutenant-general. Now in Italy, Salerno behind, Rome ahead, the sharp-featured, dark-eyed young commander is proving his ability in the field. He has a daughter, 17, a son, 18; the latter—in West Point—being the fourth generation of army Clarks.

"SCRAPE FOR SCRAP"

While it is being found necessary to "scrape for scrap" to meet the increasing demands of the steel industry, efforts of citizens cooperating in the Victory Scrap Drive are beginning to produce results.

When the Victory Scrap Drive started the outlook was very dark and is not yet light enough to warrant optimism, the Advisory Committee on Salvage of the State Council of Defense reports, but adds that the situation is showing definite signs of improvement.

Early returns indicate an increase in the enthusiasm necessary to the success of the campaign, according to the committee, but it warns that the goal is not yet reached and much work is yet to be done and many thousands of tons of iron and steel scrap must yet be located if the armed forces of the nation are to be furnished the arms and ammunitions they need for victory.

Should the quota of scrap not be reached it would be Pennsylvania's first home front failure, it was declared, and would be the first time that the citizens of the Keystone State have let down the boys who are fighting for them.

Today, each individual American soldier requires an average of 4,900 pounds of steel, in the form of carried or supported equipment. In World War I a soldier needed 90 pounds. Project this figure to include an army of ten to thirteen million men. Add to it the astronomical tonnages of steel blown to bits as explosives from which no scrap is recovered. Add to that the steel being used to produce cargo and warships at a rate the world has never seen before. Top it off with the feverish building and expansion of new war plants, shipyards, factories, and suddenly it is found that the present record steel-making capacity of almost 98,00 ,000 tons a year must be lifted by millions of tons to clinch the Victory.

Salvage is a job for every Pennsylvanian to do, the committee explains. Governor Martin has emphasized the importance of it. He has said that the drive must not fail. Dr. Ralph Cooper Hutchison, executive director of the Council of Defense, and Mrs. Worthington Scranton, commander of Civilian War Services, both have pointed out that the gathering of scrap is a job that must be done and done right now.

CHRISTMAS—IN NOVEMBER

The following letter from the Office of the Postmaster General was received at the local post office today:

To Postmaster, Warren, Pa.:

I ask your cooperation and through you that of business concerns and the public in meeting a postal problem that is far more serious than ever before.

We have handled the Christmas parcels for our Army forces overseas. We now face the tremendous task of receiving, transporting and delivering on time the vast volume of Christmas mail for our people at home. There is only one solution to that problem: "Christmas Gifts Generally Must Be Mailed in November." There can be no assurance, in view of the unavoidable handicaps of war, that gifts and cards mailed within the last two weeks preceding Christmas will be delivered on time. Many people, last year, who did not mail within the time specified by the Post Office Department learned with regret that their friend did not receive the gifts and cards until after Christmas. The only way in which delivery of Holiday mail can be made on time is by spreading the mailings over a longer period so that the limited amount of available transportation and experienced postal personnel can be used during more weeks. Holiday mail must be so arranged that its dispatch will not impede the movement of war materials, armed forces nor military mail.

Postmasters are therefore requested to bring to the attention of their patrons this warning: The War Has Dislocated the Christmas Mailing Season. This Year, November Is the Time for Mailing Christmas Gifts and Cards. Gifts Should Be Marked "DO NOT OPEN UNTIL CHRISTMAS."

(Signed) Frank C. Walker,
Postmaster General.

PRICE PRIMER

Higher accountancy is needed if you are a conscientious housewife who has signed a Home Front Pledge to pay no more than ceiling prices.

As price regulations multiply, and more foods go on rationing, it would be helpful to have a simple booklet giving points and ceiling prices. It also becomes more difficult to work out a plan for such a booklet, because there are different ceilings in different parts of the country, and invarious types of stores. Therefore, as much as you need it, you may not see a price handbook for some time.

After reviewing the results of elections in eastern seaboard states Tuesday, looks as if next year's campaign will be more exciting than many had anticipated.

Washington In Wartime

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — In Congress now hearings are being held before the Subcommittee on War Contract Terminations of the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

It is one of those subjects generally considered dull as dishwater. Although labor and industry are interested mightily, they aren't particularly "het up" about it and to much of the public "contract termination" is only a vague term that isn't worth a second thought

That it's worth more than a second and even third thought becomes obvious with the realization that a sloppy, inept policy of contract terminations could wreck industry when war draws to a close and bring unprecedented unemployment, industrial chaos and depression.

It's the fear of that very thing that slows down the industrial war effort every time we win victories and it appears that our enemies may be crushed within a few months. No industrialist wants to be caught napping when peace comes and those who can get out of the production of war goods and into the production of civilian goods soonest are going to skim the cream from that lush vat of savings being held against the day when we can buy all the things we want to buy.

IN order to do that, they are going to have to wind up their war business with Uncle Sam speedily and without loss of working capital. That's what "contract termination" means but its magnitude can only be appreciated when you look at the facts.

It's a cinch now that there isn't going to be any single V-day when all our enemies will fold up at once as they did in 1918.

But if there were such a day, there would be between fifty and 75 billion dollars of unfinished business between Uncle Sam and war industries. This would involve something like 250,000 primary contracts and more than 5,000,000 subcontractors.

On many of them, Uncle Sam can merely say we don't want that now. But in many instances he can't say that without wrecking the producer who may have millions tied up in raw materials and overhead, and without throwing hundreds of communities into an unemployment panic as management scurries to financial cover by firing millions.

In addition, it is estimated that industry would have around fifteen billions tied up on partially completed contracts. The problem arises of how best Uncle Sam can dodge taking delivery of tanks, planes, guns, etc., which are no longer good for anything but the junk pile, without leaving the manufacturers holding the sack.

THERE has already been testimony introduced that some of our biggest producers, some employing as many as 50,000 men, are operating on such narrow margins of working capital that they couldn't go on for more than a week or two if the Government suddenly should say we want no more of your product.

Thought of in those terms, "contract termination" becomes one of the vital issues of today. It is one peacetime issue that must be decided while war is going on. To delay might cause far greater waste than any the economy minded Congressmen are talking about today.

Stamp News

LIECHTENSTEIN, the little principality located in central Europe between Germany and Switzerland, has added the final four stamps to its "Princes set" started December 18, 1941. Latest of the pictorial stamps are: 20-rappen, dark red, bearing the portrait of Prince Alois II, whose reign dated from 1836 to 1858; 30-r, dark blue, Prince John II (1858-1929); one franc, bistre gray, Prince Franz (1929-1938), and 1.50-f, dark green, Prince Franz-Joseph II, present ruler. The stamps were released July 5 of this year and are good for postage until March 31, 1944.

Four earlier stamps in the same set have just reached this country although they were issued in October 1942. Values, colors and subjects are: 20-r, red, Prince Johann Karl (1732-1748); 30-r, blue, Prince Franz Joseph I (1772-1781); 1-f, red violet, Prince Alois I, (1781-1805) and 1.50-f dark brown, Prince Johann I (1805-1836).

Additional details of the new Free Poland set and illustrations of the eight stamps are now available from the Polish Telegraph Agency. Colors are: 5 groszy, red; 10-g, green; 25-g, violet; 55-g, blue; 75-g, red brown; 80-g, magenta; 1 zloty, dark olive, and 1z50g, black. The stamps are engraved and unwatermarked. Inscriptions on the 80-g are "Polish Army in the Middle East" (top), "Gen. Sikorski" (left side), and "June, 1943" (right side). The 1z50g stamp, paying tribute to Poland's underground forces bears the inscription across the top, "The Secret Press in Poland."

Although many of its colonies were already aligned with the Free French cause, the Vichy French government issued in January, 1942, a total of 88 stamps for its various colonial possessions. Representing some 24 sets of from three to four stamps, the issues have now reached this country through neutral sources. The designs are colorful, and differ according to colony. It is extremely doubtful whether many of the stamps ever reached the colonies for whose use they were intended.

Two other Vichy French issues also have been disclosed. One is a four franc blue commemorating the 200th anniversary of the birth in 1743 of Anton Lavoisier, French scientist, and bearing his portrait. The second is a 20 franc green horizontal-type stamp portraying Lake Lerie with mountains in the background and grazing cattle in the foreground.

A new 1.50-f red issue of French Morocco portrays the "Scene in Rabat" used on the larger 1, 2 and 3-centimes issues of 1918-24.

Portraits of President Roosevelt and President Arroyo of Ecuador and a picture of the White House in Washington will appear on a new set of eight stamps to be issued early in November by Ecuador, according to J. & H. Stolow, New York wholesalers. The same firm reports that Germany has issued a new set of 12 semi-postals, Belgium two Winterhelp issues both of 10fr plus 20fr in value but in different colors, and Monaco a new set of 15 values bearing the portrait of Prince Louis II. Other new issues reported by Stolow's include: San Marino, 10 values bearing the coat of arms of that country and Croatia, a new Juventute issue of two stamps.

Memo for first day cover collectors: future first day sales dates of the United States five-cent stamps honoring Axis-overrun countries are: November 9, Albania; November 23, Austria; December 7, Denmark. Covers for first day cancellations should be sent to the Postmaster, Washington 13, D. C.

Hollywood Gossip

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Bette Davis is back on the sound stages, throwing herself energetically into the business of acting like the good trouper she is.

She has been away eight months, most of the time at her farm near Sugar Hill, New Hampshire. Since she left, she has been widowed by the death of Arthur Farnsworth, but her sets are open to visitors as always—with the one request, undramatized, that the subject of her bereavement not be brought up.

Her new picture is "Mr. Skeffington," from the novel by "Elizabeth." It's a meaty part for her, a gamut-running role—but with a decidedly Billie Burke-ish fluttery flavor. Claude Rains plays the title role, the Jewish stockbroker. Young Richard Waring plays the wayward brother, and Walter Abel is the steady, reliable cousin.

THE twin Epstein brothers—Julius J. and Phillip G.—did the screenplay and are co-producers. They have switched the locale from England to New York, kept the characters of the book and built up a plot. It promises to be quite a production, with a shooting schedule of two months. Vincent Sherman is directing.

The first day Bette was on the set, one representing her "home," she made her usual "inspection." Set workers have come to expect it of her. The routine is something like this: "Hmmm," she says, looking around. "Hmmm. I think the flowers would look better on that table. And we'll move that light over here. And, hmmm, those curtains are, well, I guess they're all right. But that awful clock! Who would live with a thing like that in her home?"

After darting around to cover all the nooks and corners, she stops in front of Fred MacLean, the set-dresser, with: "It's a beautiful job, Freddie. Just beautiful. Those few little changes, maybe we'll make them later. Maybe they're not important. But I like it. I like it very much. Now, let's get along with a rehearsal." It's her way of getting acquainted with all her movie "homes."

SO she went into her rehearsal for a 1910 scene of the picture. She is dressed for a ball, and is putting on her jewels at her dressing table. She has lines with Abel and Waring, but her business with the jewels makes her forget them—or perhaps it's merely the excitement of starting a new picture.

"I'm sorry," she says. "I haven't been so jittery in years."

Joan Crawford, newly signed to the Davis lot, hasn't reported yet, but already the wags are playing with the idea of a feud between established queen Bette and new queen Joan.

After Bette has bobbled three times, waggish producer Julius J. Epstein cracks in a loud stage whisper: "Better warm up Crawford!"

Public Urged To Buy, Store and Eat More Warren Co. Spuds

Have you a sack of potatoes in your home?

That's the new patriotic inquiry on the home front today. The answer bears directly on the war effort.

With the national fall crop amounting to 360 million bushels—73 million bushels more than in 1942—it looks like a full dinner pail for the American people at war.

But waste and spoilage and lack of storage space may steal a great deal of food. There have been other bumper crops of foods essential for war. They have been stored for winter and there isn't much space for the storage left for the surprise package of potatoes.

The average family of five normally eats a little less than a bushel of potatoes a month. But there are enough potatoes this year to provide nearly an extra bushel of potatoes each month for every family. Local defense committees over the country are endeavoring to have each family store some potatoes now. For home storage cellars, closets or even a barrel or pit in the back yard, will do. Keep them away from light—light will turn them greenish and make them taste bitter. Don't allow them to freeze as that will spoil them.

In Warren county this year, the potato growers have done yoeman work getting their crop planted and harvested. In addition to the numberless farmers and victory gardeners who grew quantities of potatoes, the Potato Grower's Association has produced a large crop. These are now being graded and sacked under the Grower's Association regulations and sent to market. The Grower's Association in this county planted and harvested 552 acres of potatoes. These have all been grown and sprayed in the most approved manner and are the finest potatoes that can be bought.

Figures given by the Grower's Association show that Oscar Lauger, whose farm is between Youngsville and Chandler's Valley had 140 acres planted and harvested. W. D. Finzer, between North Warren and Russell, had 90 acres; Robert Moore, of Garland, and Frank Dodds, of Columbus, each had 40 acres; John Jensen of Columbus harvested 30 acres; Harry Long, Pittsfield, had 25 acres.

Other members in the county are: Stanley Flatt, 10 acres H. A. Crary, 12 acres; Stanley Ward, 15 acres; Rosecliffe Farm, 10 acres; John Zolka, 10 acres; Carl Spelling, 10 acres; John Allen, 10 acres; Charles Camp and Lloyd Hedges, nine acres each; Homer Gibson, Paul Duntley, Gerald Faulkner, and W. C. Leofsky, eight acres each; O. E. Loper, seven acres; Ray Greenlee, J. D. Upton, Paul Trisket, John Zeb, and Harry Wentzel, six acres each; Nels Anderson, W. M. Hill, H. W. Conarro, Stanley Lawrence and Reider Perrin, five acres each; Fred Martin, three acres.

This is an excellant showing for the Warren County Potato Grower's Association and their products always get the top prices due to their preparation for market. Each year the Association adds new members and it has been demonstrated that potatoes are a good crop in Warren county, due to soil and climactic conditions. Careful handling of the crop has brought a demand for the Association and they are marketed with no trouble.

Every resident of the city is asked to buy and store their potatoes for the season to come. A hall closet can be used for storage, if necessary, so that it is dark and the temperature is between 40 and 60.

Nutritionists place potatoes high on the list of essential foods. But, they have been unjustly accused of being unusually fattening and thus get in the bad graces of the women who desire to retain their girlish figure. "Tain't necessarily so." Let's compare. A medium potato contains 100 calories. A pat of butter (remember butter)? contains about the same, so would two slices of bacon. A pound of potatoes hides about 385 calories, but, a pound loaf of white bread contains 1185 calories.

So store your potatoes now, before they are put in storage and the extra cost of handling causes prices to rise. What's cheaper or better food than the good old reliable spud?

READING & WRITING

BY Edwin Seaver AND Robin M'Kown

"BATTLES are like marriages. They have a certain fundamental experience they share in common; they differ infinitely but still they are all alike."

CAPT. RALPH INGERSOLL

"The Battle is the Pay-Off," by Captain Ralph Ingersoll tells the story of one battle in Africa which the author witnessed in the capacity of officer-observer. Through his description of this one battle, however, Captain Ingersoll makes vividly clear how a modern army operates, how soldiers are trained and how that training takes effect under fire, how a battle is planned, carried out and won.

"The Battle is the Pay-Off" is a November selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club. The Army thinks so highly of it that they have ordered a special edition of 75,000 copies for distribution among our fighting men. It has also been running currently in the Infantry Journal.

Up until about a year ago, Ralph Ingersoll, the author, was editor of the New York newspaper PM. Then he enlisted in the Army as a private. The first lesson he had to learn, he says, was that he was no longer Ralph Ingersoll, editor, but one-four-millionth or one-seven-millionth or one-eight-millionth part of the Army of the United States—for the duration.

Captain Ingersoll in his book tells how each unit of the Army functions. The business of surviving and moving itself from one place to another is ninety per cent of the Army's business, he points out. The combat engineers who go ahead to find and test water have a vital role. So do the men in charge of mine-detecting. The same is true of those who train soldiers so that long marches and nights of sleeping outdoors are no undue hardship; and of the medical corps who take efficient care of the battle wounded.

There have been many books on individual heroism in battle. "The Battle is the Pay-Off" is the first book to make the Army as a whole the hero.

The French Foreign Legion has a tradition that it must never surrender as long as arms hold out. Captain Ingersoll tells how one Foreign Legion post, sympathetic to the Americans, saved their honor and at the same time avoided fighting. When scouts reported the advance of the Americans, the Lieutenant in charge of the Post ordered that all weapons be thrown in the well. With no arms, he figured, he could honorably surrender.

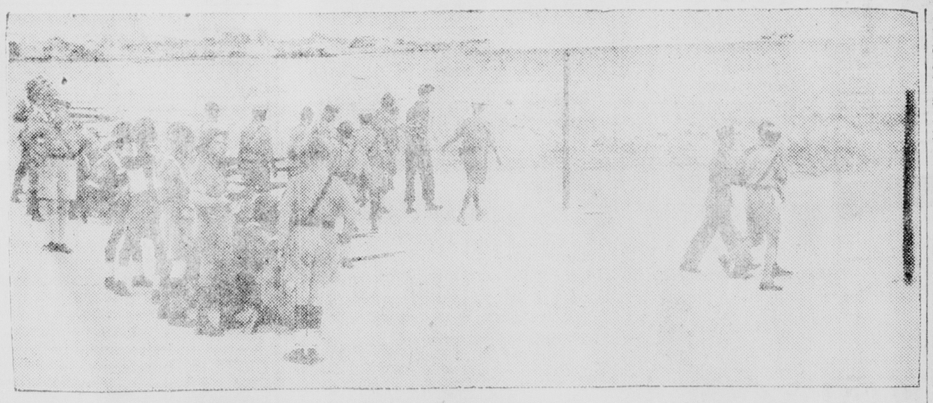
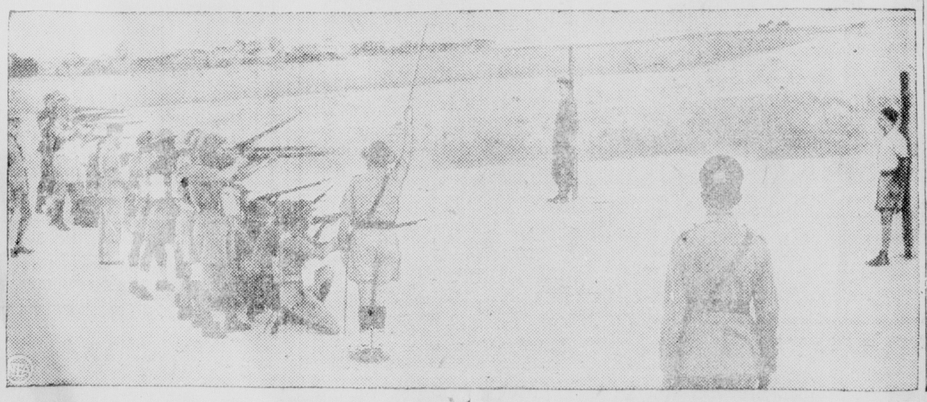
TWO NAZI SPIES DIE BEFORE FRENCH FIRING SQUAD





These dramatic pictures show the end of the careers of two enemy agents, trained in German espionage and sabotage schools before being sent to work in Syria and the Levant States. Caught and tried at Aleppo by the Fighting French, they confessed planning to poison Allied soldiers, to blow up power plants and reservoirs, and to get information about a refuge army.

The scene at upper left, shortly after dawn, shows guards leading the condemned men to stakes in front of two firing squads. In each squad of 12 soldiers, half of the rifles are loaded with live ammunition, the other six with blanks; and none of the soldiers knows whether he is about to help kill a man.

The saber flashes down (upper right) and 24 soldiers pull their triggers. As the slugs strike their bodies, one of the spies slumps to the ground. Bullets have sheered off the post behind the taller spy, and his body remains upright, held to the stump by the bonds.

The coup de grace—a shot in the head of each victim—has been administered by two noncoms with revolvers, and in picture at lower right, soldiers are starting to remove one of the bodies. Military ustice has been satisfied . . . A staff photographer and correspondent of YANK, the Army weekly, drove 1600 miles across a dessert and mountains to get this remarkable series of pictures.

Chapter 14

SALLY held on to the tourniquet so tightly her fingers were numb. She reached over to feel the pulse of the other injured man. It was very weak. They both needed expert medical care. But she couldn't leave them long enough to get help. Someone in the crowd would have to phone for an ambulance. She looked up at the throng pressing around her curiously.

"Will someone call Emergency Hospital—quickly. Tell them to send an ambulance at once."

A woman across from her said, "I'll go," and rushed off.

"Let's see, sister." A big policeman in glistening raincoat pushed his way through the crowd. "How many got hurt?"

Sally looked up, rivulets of rain dripping down her face. "Two, quite badly. That woman is suffering mostly from shock, I imagine." She nodded at the woman, who was sittng up, wiping her face.

"Are you a nurse?" The officer looked curiously at Sally, kneeling on the wet aisle. Her hair was stringing down her face, her skirt was sodden.

"Nurse's Aide," Sally said briefly. "Officer, don't let any of these people get that man up." She indicated the workman who had just opened his eyes. "That's the worst thing anybody can do, if he has a concussion."

"I guess you know more about it than I do. You just park here for a while, and I'll get an ambulance."

"We've already phoned Emergency for one," Sally told him.

WHEN the long familiar ambulance marked Emergency Hospital came charging up F Street, Sally drew a sigh of relief. The ten minutes she'd been on the scene seemed like years, so weighed down had she been with responsibility for the injured. Every muscle in her body ached from the stooping position she'd been in. As the white-coated doctor swung off the back steps of the ambulance and strode through the crowd. Sally was amazed to see it was Peter. He had come himself. He grinned when he saw her. "Hello, Miss Scarecrow. So you're the efficient gal they told me about."

His firm hand closed over hers for an instant as he took hold of the tourniquet. Sally laughed shakily. "I've never been so glad to see anyone. I'm afraid this man has some other injury, Peter. But at least the bleeding is stopped." She stood up, her knees shaking, her back stabbed with tiny jets of pain. The ordeal was over. At last responsibility for the injured was resting on the shoulders of an expert, not a green Nurse's Aide.

Peter's look was approving as he helped the ambulance driver lift the injured man on the stretcher. "You've done a swell job, baby. Have to see you get a Carnegie medal for this. Now mind the doctor, and go home. Take a hot bath and a sizzling lemonade and get right to bed. I don't want you to catch pneumonia to add to my chores."

He hailed a taxi driver in the crowd. "Here, take this lady home and step on it. I'll call you tomorrow and tell you how your patients are. Bye."

Sally could hear the ambulance clanging down the street as her taxi turned the corner. Now that the strain was over and she was safely on her way home, it seemed unbelievable that she had actually given first aid to an injured man. Why, even in the weeks she'd been on duty at Emergency, she had never had a chance to use her first aid knowledge. She wondered now how she had ever managed to fix a tourniquet so fast.

WITH the crisis a thing of the past, Sally realized her teeth were chattering—from nerves and from cold. She was soaked through. Her shoes were sodden, her jacket saturated. She regarded the new print dress sadly. It would probably shrink to nothing after the exposure.

As the taxi drew up in front of the rooming house, Sally reached into her wet pocketbook for the fare. But the driver shook his head. "This is on me, lady. After the way you fixed up that man back there, I guess you deserve a free ride. The way the world goes you probably won't get any thanks from that guy, whoever he is, but I'll take my hat off to you. As slick a job as I ever saw." He waved and drove off.

Walking up the rooming house stairs, Sally felt suddenly limp. The bathroom door was open, and before she went into her room, she turned on the hot water in the tub and pulled off her wet shoes and stockings. Now that she had priorities on the use of the bathroom, she went into her room for her flannel housecoat. As she opened the door, her three roommates with one accord gasped. "Did you fall in the Potomac?" Dippy inquired.

Sally was shedding her clothes as fast as she could pull them off. The print dress, already out of shape, stuck as she tried to yank it over her shoulders. "Here, give me a hand," she choked, the dress over her face. Frances pulled hard. Sally emerged red-faced on the other side. "I'll tell you all about it after I have a bath. I'm supposed to drink a hot lemonade, but there aren't any lemons."

Meg was fishing around in her dresser drawer. She pulled out a flat bottle. "You need something stronger than lemonade, from the looks of you. Here, take a swallow." Sally was going to protest, but thought better of it as another chill rocked her. She shut her eyes and swallowed. The brandy burned her throat, but instantly began to warm her.

THE others were kidding Meg. "So you've been holding out on us, Meg. How long has that been there?"

"Brandy is an essential in any medicine cabinet," Meg said primly, and the three howled.

The brandy plus the steaming bath completely dispelled the chills. Sally tied the warm housecoat tightly around her, and got into bed. Then she told her impatient roommates the story.

Dippy summed up their recation. "Our little Sally," she said, shaking her head. "The town certainly hasn't been the same since you landed here. I don't know whether I like rooming with such a notorious character. She gets a swell job and a raise a few weeks after she gets inside the War Commission, hooks herself a doctor right off the bat, and then has to do a Florence Nightingale right in the middle of F Street! My soul!"

Chapter 15

KNOCK, knock, knock, The insistent pounding on the door woke Sally from sleep so deep she didn't even know where she was when she woke up. Then she remembered. After the strain of the accident yesterday, no wonder she was sleeping so hard Evidently her roommates had gone to work without waking her up. She staggered to the door

The landlady, a grim-featured woman who always wore a dirty apron, stood there holding out a paper She thrust it at Sally accusingly "Is this you?"

There, spread across the bottom of the front page, was a four-column headline. "Government Worker Saves Diplomat's Life." Sally stared at it, fascinated. There was a picture of the accident car, with a white arrow pointing to the safety aisle. Bold type underneath announced that Sally Thayer, War Commission secretary, had saved the life of Serge Vihjalmur, representative of the Polish government-in-exile, by improvising a tourniquet. "Sally Thayer, typical government war worker, wakes up today to find herself a heroine," the story began.

Sally looked dazedly at the landlady. "If you're this girl," the woman said, sounding as displeased as though Sally had a criminal record, "there's a couple of reporter fellows downstairs. And I don't want them sitting around my house." She dropped the paper inside the room, and banged the door shut

IT WAS all too much for Sally. Last night's events were unreal enough, without having the injured man turn into a celebrity. Reporters downstairs. Maybe photographers. Sally groaned.

She started to dress for the session with the newsmen downstairs. She couldn't find her earrings. Twice she dropped her lipstick on the floor. She was all dressed when she discovered her stockings didn't match.

She had walked three steps down the stairs, when there was a sudden rush below and the hall swarmed with men. Immediately dazzling light bathed Sally in white brilliance as flash bulbs popped. "Right there! Hold it! Now come down a few steps!"

Sally stood it for a second, then crumpled up on the stairs, her face in her arms. There was an embarrassed silence. Then one man came up the stairs, his hat in his hand. "I'm sorry, Miss Thayer. We didn't mean to upset you. But after the swell thing you did last night, naturally the boys want to have a picture. We've already gotten a shot of the doctor at Emergency, but of course you're the star. Let's start all over again." His voice was friendly; he put an arm beneath her elbow. "Why not come down here and just tell us how you felt all through it. Then the boys will take a couple of pictures—good ones—and it will all be over."

Somehow she got through it. She tried to tell them what had happened, but she made it sound so simple. Anyone who knew first aid would have done what she did. The reporters disagreed. So they shot questions right and left. Finally she was rescued by the same man. "OK, let's call it a day. Miss Thayer probably wants to get some breakfast." He turned to Sally. "How about it? Let's go round the corner and relax over some good coffee."

SOMEONE grabbed his arm. "No, you don't, Bob. We'll all take Miss Thayer to breakfast, thank you. Get your hat, Miss Thayer."

Pedestrians stared at them as they swarmed over the sidewalk, six men and one young girl in a navy blue dress with a white pique collar and round sailor hat with blue streamers. They tramped into a cafe on Connecticut Avenue that Sally had always avoided because it looked tough. It proved to have the best coffee cake she had ever eaten. Sally sat on a stool. The rest stood up around her.

Bob grinned down at her. "I'll bet you're going to get a lot of work done today."

Sally had almost forgotten she had a job. She looked at her watch. "Good heavens! My boss has a big session at 10 and here I am. I've got to tear. Thank you so much for my breakfast." Before they knew what was going on, she'd rushed out the door and down the street.

Sally dreaded every step of the way to her office in the War Commission—now that she knew what was spread all over the front page. But evidently she was still anonymous here. There were always such crowds in the elevators that your features were slightly mashed while you rode up. She slipped thankfully into the third-floor office and stopped short. A huge vase of dark red roses stood on her desk. The white card beside it said simply, "Don't let all this go to your head. It's routine prescription in cases of this kind."

Sally stood smiling down at the card. Peter. What a nice guy he was. Simultaneously with her thoughts the telephone rang. Peter's voice on the wire was unmistakable. "Gosh, you have to knock off work for the morning to get hold of someone up at your shop. I've had two wrong extensions."

"JUST my low-down way of getting back in your good graces. I've meant to call you since that first evening, when you finally spoke to me in a friendly way. But I've been up to my ears. Now that you're a heroine, I think I'd like to know you better." Peter had a disarming way of stating the other person's reaction before he had time to do it himself. Sally had wondered why Peter hadn't repeated his first invitation—especially since he had seemed to enjoy himself as much as she had.

"I thought you'd like to know you were right on that concussion. If any well-meaning soul had moved that guy, he might be in the other world now. And now, what are you doing tonight?"

Sally started to say "nothing," till she remembered the USO dance. Her heart sank. "Oh, Peter, I'm so sorry. I'm supposed to go up to Fort Meade."

"Putting me in competition with the Army, are you? Well, in that case, since for the first time in six months I'm not on duty Sunday, I'll come around and you can tell me all about the soldier boys. How about saving your appetite for a fancy breakfast around twelve?"

"I'd love to. And thank you so much for the flowers, Peter. I feel like a glamour girl, anyway."

"You don't do badly at all. See you tomorrow. Be good."

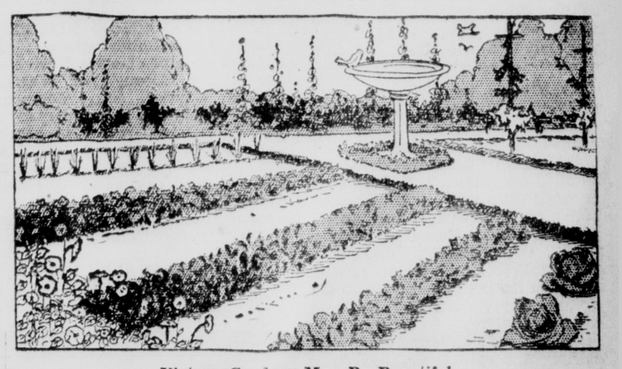
Fall Sown Flowers for Victory Garden Borders



Victory Gardens May Be Beautiful.

A fashion for decorating Victory gardens with flower borders began to spread last summer, and such beautiful effects were achieved that the practice is sure to increase.

Unless the flowers are confined to narrow ribbons along paths and boundaries in which dwarf bedding types can be used, the best flowers to grow alongside vegetables are those which are tall and stay upright, where they will not interfere with cultivating.

These are also the flowers for cutting, and not only will decorate the garden but also provide blossoms for bowl and vase arrangements in the house.

Many of these annuals can be sown this fall, after the Victory garden plot has been cleaned up and spaded for next spring's planting.

Centaureas, which include excellent red, white and blue varieties, will winter safely even if they come up from seed this fall. The same is true of annual larkspur, indispensable for cutting. Both had best be sown this fall to get an early start next spring.

Other annuals that can be sown now are all the various members of the poppy tribe, petunias, snapdragons, alyssum, nicotina (the flowering tobacco), gypsophila, Chinese forget-me-nots, calendulas and hosts of others. The tender annuals, such as marigolds and zinnias, should be held until spring, although occasionally marigolds self-sow.

Snapdragons which have bloomed this summer may be cut back and given a protective cover and come through for early bloom next spring. Experiment has shown that the California wax paper cloches will bring the snaps through the winter in fine shape. The cloche should have a small ventilating slit cut in its side.

The one factor in fall seed sowing to be attended to is mulch. Heavy rains will wash the seeds out of their regular rows unless a protection against the driving showers is given. Leaves, straw or stalks of the flower garden will give ample protection. If the seeds can be sown in a seed bed for transplanting in the spring, a wooden curb about the bed to prevent the washing of heavy rains is advisable.

READING & WRITING

BY Edwin Seaver AND Robin McKown

"BATTLES are like marriages. They have a certain fundamental experience they share in common; they differ infinitely but still they are all alike."

CAPT. RALPH INGERSOLL

"The Battle is the Pay-Off," by Captain Ralph Ingersoll tells the story of one battle in Africa which the author witnessed in the capacity of officer-observer. Through his description of this one battle, however, Captain Ingersoll makes vividly clear how a modern army operates, how soldiers are trained and how that training takes effect under fire, how a battle is planned, carried out and won.

"The Battle is the Pay-Off" is a November selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club. The Army thinks so highly of it that they have ordered a special edition of 75,000 copies for distribution among our fighting men. It has also been running currently in the Infantry Journal.

Up until about a year ago, Ralph Ingersoll, the author, was editor of the New York newspaper PM. Then he enlisted in the Army as a private. The first lesson he had to learn, he says, was that he was no longer Ralph Ingersoll, editor, but one-four-millionth or one-seven-millionth or one-eight-millionth part of the Army of the United States—for the duration.

Captain Ingersoll in his book tells how each unit of the Army functions. The business of surviving and moving itself from one place to another is ninety per cent of the Army's business, he points out. The combat engineers who go ahead to find and test water have a vital role. So do the men in charge of mine-detecting. The same is true of those who train soldiers so that long marches and nights of sleeping outdoors are no undue hardship; and of the medical corps who take efficient care of the battle wounded.

There have been many books on individual heroism in battle. "The Battle is the Pay-Off" is the first book to make the Army as a whole the hero.

The French Foreign Legion has a tradition that it must never surrender as long as arms hold out. Captain Ingersoll tells how one Foreign Legion post, sympathetic to the Americans, saved their honor and at the same time avoided fighting. When scouts reported the advance of the Americans, the Lieutenant in charge of the Post ordered that all weapons be thrown in the well. With no arms, he figured, he could honorably surrender.

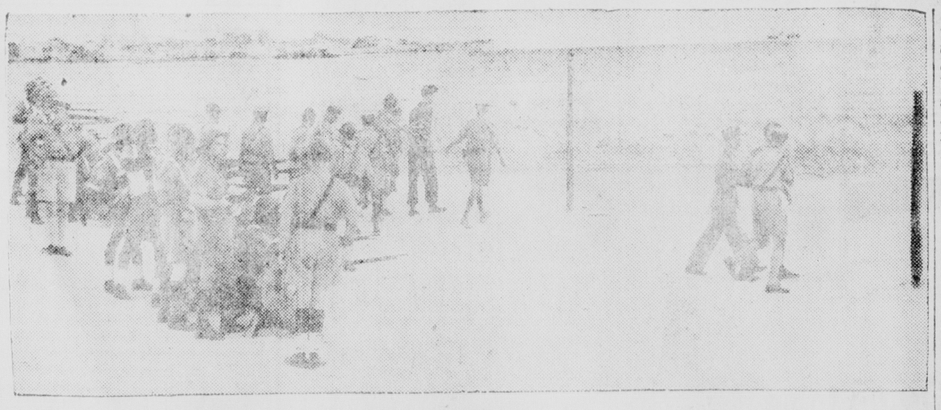
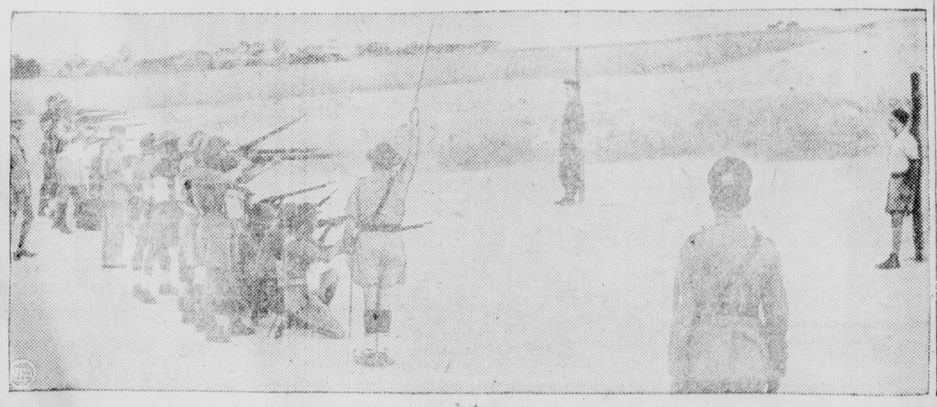
TWO NAZI SPIES DIE BEFORE FRENCH FIRING SQUAD





These dramatic pictures show the end of the careers of two enemy agents, trained in German espionage and sabotage schools before being sent to work in Syria and the Levant States. Caught and tried at Aleppo by the Fighting French, they confessed planning to poison Allied soldiers, to blow up power plants and reservoirs, and to get information about a refuge army.

The scene at upper left, shortly after dawn, shows guards leading the condemned men to stakes in front of two firing squads. In each squad of 12 soldiers, half of the rifles are loaded with live ammunition, the other six with blanks; and none of the soldiers knows whether he is about to help kill a man.

The saber flashes down (upper right) and 24 soldiers pull their triggers. As the slugs strike their bodies, one of the spies slumps to the ground. Bullets have sheered off the post behind the taller spy, and his body remains upright, held to the stump by the bonds.

The coup de grace—a shot in the head of each victim—has been administered by two noncoms with revolvers, and in picture at lower right, soldiers are starting to remove one of the bodies. Military ustice has been satisfied . . . A staff photographer and correspondent of YANK, the Army weekly, drove 1600 miles across a dessert and mountains to get this remarkable series of pictures.

Chapter 14

SALLY held on to the tourniquet so tightly her fingers were numb. She reached over to feel the pulse of the other injured man. It was very weak. They both needed expert medical care. But she couldn't leave them long enough to get help. Someone in the crowd would have to phone for an ambulance. She looked up at the throng pressing around her curiously.

"Will someone call Emergency Hospital—quickly. Tell them to send an ambulance at once."

A woman across from her said, "I'll go," and rushed off.

"Let's see, sister." A big policeman in glistening raincoat pushed his way through the crowd. "How many got hurt?"

Sally looked up, rivulets of rain dripping down her face. "Two, quite badly. That woman is suffering mostly from shock, I imagine." She nodded at the woman, who was sittng up, wiping her face.

"Are you a nurse?" The officer looked curiously at Sally, kneeling on the wet aisle. Her hair was stringing down her face, her skirt was sodden.

"Nurse's Aide," Sally said briefly. "Officer, don't let any of these people get that man up." She indicated the workman who had just opened his eyes. "That's the worst thing anybody can do, if he has a concussion."

"I guess you know more about it than I do. You just park here for a while, and I'll get an ambulance."

"We've already phoned Emergency for one," Sally told him.

WHEN the long familiar ambulance marked Emergency Hospital came charging up F Street, Sally drew a sigh of relief. The ten minutes she'd been on the scene seemed like years, so weighed down had she been with responsibility for the injured. Every muscle in her body ached from the stooping position she'd been in. As the white-coated doctor swung off the back steps of the ambulance and strode through the crowd. Sally was amazed to see it was Peter. He had come himself. He grinned when he saw her. "Hello. Miss Scarecrow. So you're the efficient gal they told me about."

His firm hand closed over hers for an instant as he took hold of the tourniquet. Sally laughed shakily. "I've never been so glad to see anyone. I'm afraid this man has some other injury, Peter. But at least the bleeding is stopped." She stood up, her knees shaking, her back stabbed with tiny jets of pain. The ordeal was over. At last responsibility for the injured was resting on the shoulders of an expert, not a green Nurse's Aide.

Peter's look was approving as he helped the ambulance driver lift the injured man on the stretcher. "You've done a swell job, baby. Have to see you get a Carnegie medal for this. Now mind the doctor, and go home. Take a hot bath and a sizzling lemonade and get right to bed. I don't want you to catch pneumonia to add to my chores."

He hailed a taxi driver in the crowd. "Here, take this lady home and step on it. I'll call you tomorrow and tell you how your patients are. Bye."

Sally could hear the ambulance clanging down the street as her taxi turned the corner. Now that the strain was over and she was safely on her way home, it seemed unbelievable that she had actually given first aid to an injured man. Why, even in the weeks she'd been on duty at Emergency, she had never had a chance to use her first aid knowledge. She wondered now how she had ever managed to fix a tourniquet so fast.

WITH the crisis a thing of the past, Sally realized her teeth were chattering—from nerves and from cold. She was soaked through. Her shoes were sodden, her jacket saturated. She regarded the new print dress sadly. It would probably shrink to nothing after the exposure.

As the taxi drew up in front of the rooming house, Sally reached into her wet pocketbook for the fare. But the driver shook his head. "This is on me, lady. After the way you fixed up that man back there, I guess you deserve a free ride. The way the world goes you probably won't get any thanks from that guy, whoever he is, but I'll take my hat off to you. As slick a job as I ever saw." He waved and drove off.

Walking up the rooming house stairs, Sally felt suddenly limp. The bathroom door was open, and before she went into her room, she turned on the hot water in the tub and pulled off her wet shoes and stockings. Now that she had priorities on the use of the bathroom, she went into her room for her flannel housecoat. As she opened the door, her three roommates with one accord gasped. "Did you fall in the Potomac?" Dippy inquired.

Sally was shedding her clothes as fast as she could pull them off. The print dress, already out of shape, stuck as she tried to yank it over her shoulders. "Here, give me a hand," she choked, the dress over her face. Frances pulled hard. Sally emerged red-faced on the other side. "I'll tell you all about it after I have a bath. I'm supposed to drink a hot lemonade, but there aren't any lemons."

Meg was fishing around in her dresser drawer. She pulled out a flat bottle. "You need something stronger than lemonade, from the looks of you. Here, take a swallow." Sally was going to protest, but thought better of it as another chill rocked her. She shut her eyes and swallowed. The brandy burned her throat, but instantly began to warm her.

THE others were kidding Meg. "So you've been holding out on us, Meg. How long has that been there?"

"Brandy is an essential in any medicine cabinet," Meg said primly, and the three howled.

The brandy plus the steaming bath completely dispelled the chills. Sally tied the warm housecoat tightly around her, and got into bed. Then she told her impatient roommates the story.

Dippy summed up their recation. "Our little Sally," she said, shaking her head. "The town certainly hasn't been the same since you landed here. I don't know whether I like rooming with such a notorious character. She gets a swell job and a raise a few weeks after she gets inside the War Commission, hooks herself a doctor right off the bat, and then has to do a Florence Nightingale right in the middle of F Street! My soul!"

Chapter 15

KNOCK, knock, knock, The insistent pounding on the door woke Sally from sleep so deep she didn't even know where she was when she woke up. Then she remembered. After the strain of the accident yesterday, no wonder she was sleeping so hard Evidently her roommates had gone to work without waking her up. She staggered to the door

The landlady, a grim-featured woman who always wore a dirty apron, stood there holding out a paper She thrust it at Sally accusingly "Is this you?"

There, spread across the bottom of the front page, was a four-column headline. "Government Worker Saves Diplomat's Life." Sally stared at it, fascinated. There was a picture of the accident car, with a white arrow pointing to the safety aisle. Bold type underneath announced that Sally Thayer, War Commission secretary, had saved the life of Serge Vihjalmur, representative of the Polish government-in-exile, by improvising a tourniquet. "Sally Thayer, typical government war worker, wakes up today to find herself a heroine," the story began.

Sally looked dazedly at the landlady. "If you're this girl," the woman said, sounding as displeased as though Sally had a criminal record, "there's a couple of reporter fellows downstairs. And I don't want them sitting around my house." She dropped the paper inside the room, and banged the door shut

IT WAS all too much for Sally. Last night's events were unreal enough, without having the injured man turn into a celebrity. Reporters downstairs. Maybe photographers. Sally groaned.

She started to dress for the session with the newsmen downstairs. She couldn't find her earrings. Twice she dropped her lipstick on the floor. She was all dressed when she discovered her stockings didn't match.

She had walked three steps down the stairs, when there was a sudden rush below and the hall swarmed with men. Immediately dazzling light bathed Sally in white brilliance as flash bulbs popped. "Right there! Hold it! Now come down a few steps!"

Sally stood it for a second, then crumpled up on the stairs, her face in her arms. There was an embarrassed silence. Then one man came up the stairs, his hat in his hand. "I'm sorry, Miss Thayer. We didn't mean to upset you. But after the swell thing you did last night, naturally the boys want to have a picture. We've already gotten a shot of the doctor at Emergency, but of course you're the star. Let's start all over again." His voice was friendly; he put an arm beneath her elbow. "Why not come down here and just tell us how you felt all through it. Then the boys will take a couple of pictures—good ones—and it will all be over."

Somehow she got through it. She tried to tell them what had happened, but she made it sound so simple. Anyone who knew first aid would have done what she did. The reporters disagreed. So they shot questions right and left. Finally she was rescued by the same man. "OK, let's call it a day. Miss Thayer probably wants to get some breakfast." He turned to Sally. "How about it? Let's go round the corner and relax over some good coffee."

SOMEONE grabbed his arm. "No, you don't, Bob. We'll all take Miss Thayer to breakfast, thank you. Get your hat, Miss Thayer."

Pedestrians stared at them as they swarmed over the sidewalk, six men and one young girl in a navy blue dress with a white pique collar and round sailor hat with blue streamers. They tramped into a cafe on Connecticut Avenue that Sally had always avoided because it looked tough. It proved to have the best coffee cake she had ever eaten. Sally sat on a stool. The rest stood up around her.

Sally had almost forgotten she had a job. She looked at her watch. "Good heavens! My boss has a big session at 10 and here I am. I've got to tear. Thank you so much for my breakfast." Before they knew what was going on, she'd rushed out the door and down the street.

Sally dreaded every step of the way to her office in the War Commission—now that she knew what was spread all over the front page. But evidently she was still anonymous here. There were always such crowds in the elevators that your features were slightly mashed while you rode up. She slipped thankfully into the third-floor office and stopped short. A huge vase of dark red roses stood on her desk. The white card beside it said simply, "Don't let all this go to your head. It's routine prescription in cases of this kind."

Sally stood smiling down at the card. Peter. What a nice guy he was. Simultaneously with her thoughts the telephone rang. Peter's voice on the wire was unmistakable. "Gosh, you have to knock off work for the morning to get hold of someone up at your shop. I've had two wrong extensions."

"Peter, they're beautiful." Sally's voice was breathless.

"JUST my low-down way of getting back in your good graces. I've meant to call you since that first evening, when you finally spoke to me in a friendly way. But I've been up to my ears. Now that you're a heroine, I think I'd like to know you better." Peter had a disarming way of stating the other person's reaction before he had time to do it himself. Sally had wondered why Peter hadn't repeated his first invitation—especially since he had seemed to enjoy himself as much as she had.

"I thought you'd like to know you were right on that concussion. If any well-meaning soul had moved that guy, he might be in the other world now. And now, what are you doing tonight?"

Sally started to say "nothing," till she remembered the USO dance. Her heart sank. "Oh, Peter, I'm so sorry. I'm supposed to go up to Fort Meade."

"Putting me in competition with the Army, are you? Well, in that case, since for the first time in six months I'm not on duty Sunday, I'll come around and you can tell me all about the soldier boys. How about saving your appetite for a fancy breakfast around twelve?"

"I'd love to. And thank you so much for the flowers, Peter. I feel like a glamour girl, anyway."

"You don't do badly at all. See you tomorrow. Be good."

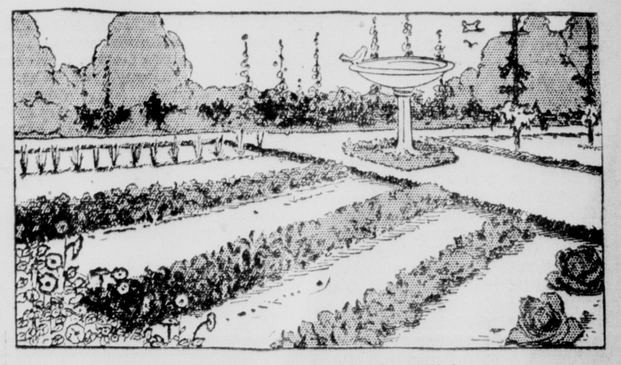
Fall Sown Flowers for Victory Garden Borders



Victory Gardens May Be Beautiful.

A fashion for decorating Victory gardens with flower borders began to spread last summer, and such beautiful effects were achieved that the practice is sure to increase.

Unless the flowers are confined to narrow ribbons along paths and boundaries in which dwarf bedding types can be used, the best flowers to grow alongside vegetables are those which are tall and stay upright, where they will not interfere with cultivating.

These are also the flowers for cutting, and not only will decorate the garden but also provide blossoms for bowl and vase arrangements in the house.

Many of these annuals can be sown this fall, after the Victory garden plot has been cleaned up and spaded for next spring's planting.

Centaureas, which include excellent red, white and blue varieties, will winter safely even if they come up from seed this fall. The same is true of annual larkspur, indispensable for cutting. Both had best be sown this fall to get an early start next spring.

Other annuals that can be sown now are all the various members of the poppy tribe, petunias, snapdragons, alyssum, nicotina (the flowering tobacco), gypsophila, Chinese forget-me-nots, calendulas and hosts of others. The tender annuals, such as marigolds and zinnias, should be held until spring, although occasionally marigolds self-sow.

Snapdragons which have bloomed this summer may be cut back and given a protective cover and come through for early bloom next spring. Experiment has shown that the California wax paper cloches will bring the snaps through the winter in fine shape. The cloche should have a small ventilating slit cut in its side.

The one factor in fall seed sowing to be attended to is mulch. Heavy rains will wash the seeds out of their regular rows unless a protection against the driving showers is given. Leaves, straw or stalks of the flower garden will give ample protection. If the seeds can be sown in a seed bed for transplanting in the spring, a wooden curb about the bed to prevent the washing of heavy rains is advisable.

Cardinal Outfielder Receives Coveted Honor As Present On 23rd Birthday Anniversary

BY TED MEIER

New York, Nov. 3—(AP)—Stan Musial, the Donora, Pa., outfielder who batted .357 for the championship St. Louis Cardinals during the past season, got a birthday present today—he was named the National League's most valuable player for 1943.

The present arrived a couple of weeks early, but alhough Stan will not celebrate his 23rd natal day until Nov. 21, there's no doubt that he and Mrs. Musial appreciated the selection made by a committee of the Baseball Writers' Association.

Out of a possible 336 points the National League batting champion received a total of 267, getting 13 of 24 first place votes.

Runnerup to Musial was his teammate, Catcher Walker Cooper, soon to be inducted into the army, who received five first place votes and a point total of 192.

Big Bill Nicholson, of the Chicago Cubs, who socked the most homers, 28, and drove in the most runs, 128, was third with 181 points.

Rounding out the top six were Billy Herman, Brooklyn second baseman who was runnerup to Musial in the batting race and to Nicholson in the BBI column; Mort Cooper, Cardinal pitcher, who received the 1942 award; and Truett "Rip" Sewell, Pittsburgh righthander who gained fame with his tantalizing slow ball. Herman received 140 points, Cooper 130 and Sewell 127.

Musial's clouting sparked the Cards to their second straight pennant. He went to bat 617 times and socked out 220 hits for the highest average in the senior loop in six years. In addition he led in doubles with 47 and triples with 20 and was runnerup in runs scored with 108.

Weekly Poll Places Purdue In Second Place In Voting

BY HAROLD CLAASSEN

New York, Nov. 3—(AP)—Purdue climbed to second place behind Notre Dame in the weekly Associated Press poll today following a weekend in which Army and Navy, erstwhile threats to Irish prestige, were unable to maintain the pace.

Notre Dame again monopolized the first place votes, getting 97 of a possible 101. The remaining four were divided equally by Pennsylvania and Southern California.

The Boilermakers cross state neighbors of the South Bend outfit, shot to second from fourth a week ago by drubbing Wisconsin, 32 to 0, while Navy was humiliated by the Irish, 33 to 6, and Army was held to a 13 to 13 tie by Pennsylvania.

Navy skidded all the way from third to seventh with the unbeaten, untied and unscored on Trojans of Southern California grabbing fourth behind Army. Pennsylvania is fifth best in the opinion of the typewriter experts with Iowa Pre-Flight, Michigan, Duke and College of Pacific filing out the top ten.

Purdue, spearheaded by Tony Butkovich and a horde of other naval trainee athletes, has pounded through seven foes without defeat this season.

Cage League At 'Y' Begins Team Picking

Last week the first meeting of the Y.M.C.A. Basketball League committee took place with President Nick Creola in the chair.

Several items of discussion were raised, some were settled and some were tabled for a later date.

One definite thing that resulted was the fixing of the starting date for the league. It will get under way Monday, November 29th.

As things look now, only one team is definitely signed, and that is the O'Connor Machine Co. five. Another independent group is signed tentatively. However, the committee felt that the possibilities for a four and maybe a six team league were good. Those classed as possibilities and waiting to be heard from are: Struthers-Wells; Rock Cleaners; National Forge; and Blomquists, last year's champions. Any other class A combine that would like to play is asked to get in touch with either Nick Creola or Physical Director Parmalee immediately. Rosters of all teams must be presented no later than Friday, November 12th, at which time the committee and team managers will meet to start the league rolling. The rosters can contain no more than ten men and must be permanent.

Physical Director Parmelee is to draw up a constitution to present for consideration at the November 12th meeting.

It was decided tokeep the trophy which has been awarded to the champion team over a period of years and is pretty bad off from wear, at the "Y" and engrave the winner's name on it. In its place the winning team will be the recipients of gold basketballs and the runner-up will receive silver memos. This gives to both teams in the playoffs individual awards

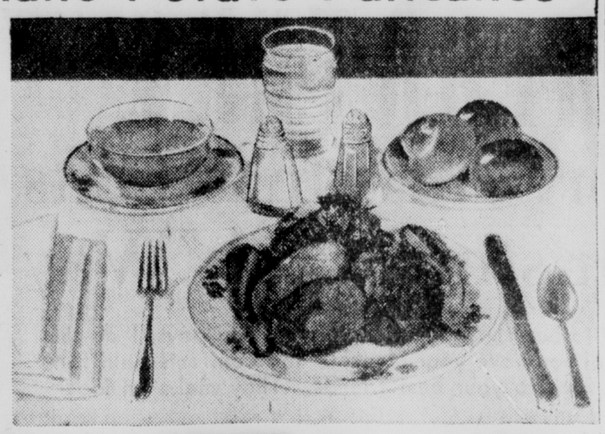
How To Make Potato Pancakes

AP Features

Uncle Sam says use more potatoes. Housewives are urged to buy their spuds by the 100-pound sack, store them carefully and use them often. After you've served them baked, boiled, creamed and fried, you might try potato pancakes as they are prepared by a famous Swiss chef, Hermann Rousch, of New York's Belmont Plaza. Ingredients needed are 2 cups grated raw potatoes, ¼ cup milk, 1 well-beaten egg, 2 tablespoons flour, salt, pepper and 1 tablespoon chopped onions. Now follow Hermann's directions, then sit back and take a bow:



1. Assemble all ingredients and utensils you will need.

2. Grate the raw potatoes and measure out 2 cupsful.

3. Add milk at once (to avoid darkening) then drain off.

4. Add other ingredients and enough milk for stiff batter.

5. Drop by spoonsful into well-greased pan, brown.

Free French Forum Opens At Algiers

Algiers, Nov. 3.—(AP)—A demand that Gen. Henri Giraud, commander-in-chief of the French armed forces, publicly renounce all ties with Vichy set the stage for the opening sessions today of the consultative assembly, France's first free political forum since 1940.

The demand was made in a press conference by five pro-DeGaullists, recent arrivals from Nazi-held France, who are attending the assembly as delegates. They declared that the French people recognize De Gaulle as chief of the government and regard Giraud as head of the military forces, but that they believed he should remain as such only if he publicly declared he had completely repudiated the Vichy government.

M'CLOSKEY IS AGAIN LOSER IN JOHNSTOWN

Johnstown, Nov. 3—(AP)—Eddie McCloskey, former Johnstown mayor and onetime state boxing commissioner, was defeated in yesterday's balloting for re-election as Cambria county commissioner, complete returns showed today. He was renominated by the Democrats in the primary without organization support.

His running mate, Commissioner Frank P Holleren, and the Republican incumbent, John Thomas Jr., were re-elected. Another Republican, Cyrus Davis, former sheriff and coroner, became the third member of the commission.

would not work until a contract is signed.

Similarly, a survey of mines employing three-fourths of Alabama's 22,000 miners showed no signs of resumption.

The reports generally reflected a lack of any sort of demonstrations in the fields, where the Stars and Stripes flew over deserted tipples.

Typical was the word from Maryland that "the miners just didn't show up."

Indiana still had 7,000 idle, with no evidence of any action pending word from UMW's policy committee.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and Interior Secretary Ickes, boss of the now government-operated mines, decided on their third meeting within 48 hours to discuss a possible basis for a contract.

The UMW policy committee arranged to hear the results of the parley shortly before noon. This group has the power to call the men back to work.

For the second time this year Mr. Roosevelt ordered the mines seized Monday night.

TRANSPORTATION IN PHILLY IS RESUMED

Philadelphia, Nov. 3—(AP)—Service on Philadelphia trolley and bus lines, disrupted in some sections yesterday by a dispute over a nickel-sized CIO button, returned to normal today in a truce between the CIO and Philadelphia Transportation Company.

Representatives of both sides met for five hours last night and agreed shortly after midnight to place the controversy before the National War Labor Board. The PTC ordered drivers not to wear CIO buttons hile on duty and CIO members, protesting, said the ban infringed on their "constitutional rights."

C.O. Hunger Strike in Pen Unchanged

Lewisburg, Nov. 3—(AP)—The hunger strike of five conscientious objectors at the Lewisburg Federal Penitentiary, now in its second month, today went on without a sign from the prisoners they would soon end their protest against prison inspection of their mail.

"The situation is just the same," declared Warden W. H. Hiatt, "that is all I can tell you."

Asked again who the striking prisoners were, the warden replied: "I can't give out the names."

Federal authorities previously announced the protest will have no effect on prison regulations at Lewisburg. The five men have been tube fed since last week.

(Note: Harold Zimmerman, former Warren high school athlete, is serving a five-year term as a conscientious objector.)

Strike Three! Japs Out

Climaxing a three-pronged offensive in the Solomons, American forces are now fighting on boggy, mountainous Bourgainville Island, final barrier to Rabaul, after previous amphibious occupational attacks on Mono and then Choiseul. The map traces the paths of these three lightning thrusts, the latest striking north of Cape Torokina on Bougainville.

CAUSE OF MINE DAMAGE

In a mine explosion, it is not the force of the blast that causes the most damage, but the after-damp, a mixture of gases. From 80 to 90 per cent of the deaths in mine explosions are caused by the after-damp.

PAYING Your Bills the HARD WAY

If you get out the old car and use up precious gas and rubber; or if you have to take a bus and then walk from one place to another, by the time you get through and count all your cost in time and effort, you have actually paid more than the small fee of 7½c per check—the only cost of a ThriftiCheck account, and you have not had the pleasure and prestige of paying your bills with imprinted personalized checks, which you can prepare easily in advance in your home or your office.

What It Means

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE

WASHINGTON—Don't be surprised if you really feel the pinch of merchandise shortages in the coming year.

This year's 90-billion dollar buying spree by a war-prospering population, combined with reduced production of civilian goods, is cutting so heavily into supplies that stocks are nearing depletion in a number of important but unnameable articles. Many shortages have been postponed only because inventories were at record levels shortly after we entered the war.

The public is familiar with the shortage of metal products, their manufacture for civilian use having been stopped or sharply curtailed. Buyers also know about the scarcity of rayon, paper and paper novelties, alcoholic beverages and clothing for a record crop of babies.

Reduction In Supplies

WPB and OPA authorities aren't telling the public about coming shortages in many specific items because they fear such information might touch off waves of panic-buying. A general indicator, however, of the reduction in supplies is the Department of Commerce estimate that stocks of durable home furnishings in department stores declined by $202,000,000 in th year ending last June.

WPB plans to have the production of certain civilian articles stepped up from time to time to meet "minimum essential requirements" The use of more steel was authorized for the manufacture this fall of kitchen utensils, bed springs, cooking stoves, hot water heaters, pins and needles and similar articles. Refrigerators, washing machines and electric irons may be produced in limited amounts during 1944.

More To Disappear

Other articles, however, will disappear from the market as the war goes on. WPB's Office of Civilian Requirements says that, owing to the need of materials in war production, it probably will be impossible to reopen substantial manufacture of many items formerly turned out for civilians

The manpower shortage is another reason for the reduction in output of civilian goods. Workers are being drawn away from less vital industries into key war plants. For example, the cotton textile industry has had to curtail production although cotton supplies are large. The shift of workers also is hurting the metal goods repair and replacement business.

Distribution Difficult

Distribution of goods from factory to consumer is becoming a tougher problem because of the strain on the country's transportation system. The railroads' capacity for handling shipments is being taxed to the limit. Car shortages have been mounting steadily in recent weeks.

The outlook so far with respect to providing John and Mary Civilian with "goods and services to maintain health, morale and working efficiency" is not alarming. John and Mary can count, however, on finding fewer and fewer goods to buy unless—and until—Germany is knocked out.

MUST HAVE WASTE PAPER

Waste paper collection in Pennsylvania's Victory Scrap Drive was given new emphasis today as reports received by the Advisory Committee on Salvage of the State Council of Defense showed a critical condition existing in the manufacture of paperboard for war uses due to a lack of waste paper at the mills.

The committee explained that an all-out collection of waste paper must be speeded up in every county of the State to keep mills having war contracts from closing. This present need for waste paper is caused by an increase in government orders for containers made of paperboard; by a cut in sulphite pulp imports and by a shortage of manpower in connection with pulpwood production.

The temporary drop in the demand for paperboard which occurred early this year has been replaced by a growing demand causing the stock piles of waste paper to decrease rapidly. An extreme shortage now exists which, unless relieved, may seriously affect the war effort.

Waste paper, the committee pointed out, is a basic resource from which are made millions of containers essential in supplying ammunition to the fighting front. Each shell is shipped in a paperboard container, carefully protected in transit. A ton of waste paper will produce 1,500 shell containers; or 47,000 boxes for 30-caliber ammunition; or 71,00 dust covers for airplane engines.

Practically everything the war program needs must be packaged. To keep the armed forces supplied with milk, army quartermasters need a million paper milk containers a day. Each time a pursuit airplane is built 20,000 sheets of protective paper is required.

About a third of the nation's waste paper is normally recovered in peacetime. Most of this comes from large industries, factories, department stores, hotels, public buildings, and apartments. About two-thirds of all paper is destroyed—going into furnaces, incinerators and rubbish heaps. It has been estimated that the average family can save a pound of waste paper a day.

Every newspaper, magazine and pamphlet should be salvaged, the committee stated. Wrapping paper, paper bags, corrugated paper, used carton, draft paper, old envelopes and clean waste paper basket paper is needed at once.

NOW THEY KNOW

One of those innumerable pieces of OPA literature brings the cheering news that even the government doesn't like to pay taxes—at least it doesn't like to be reminded of them.

OPA, in this release, is asking coal mines or dealers who deliver fuel to the government or its agencies to lump the federal transportation tax in with the rest of the bill.

By way of explanation, OPA says that "the government and its agencies object to making payment of the tax when it is stated separately."

Now they know how we feel.

SWEET CHRISTMAS

Fruit cakes and Christmas candy should be a bit more abundant this year. Industrial users have been given another 10 per cent increase of sugar for the coming season. This brings their quota up from 80 per cent to 90 per cent of the 1941 quota, so there may still have to be some curbing of the sweet tooth. However, new sweets such as candy bars and "caramel chews," made out of sweet potatoes will help fill in.

It is our pleasure to join in the welcome being extended the Rev. Beecher Rutledge and his estimable family who have arrived in Warren and occupied the rectory of Trinity Memorial Episcopal church. The Rev. Rutledge will hold his first Sunday morning service here this weekend.

It is doubtful if this country ever experienced a quieter election than the one that closes with the ballotting today. In case you haven't voted be reminded the polls close at eight o'clock.

Wet weather came along just in time to relieve the forest fire situation during the small game season.

Needlework Guild Directors Prepare For Annual Garment Collection Day

Following a tray lunch at the YWCA activities building, directors of Warren Branch, Needlework Guild of America, held their annual business meeting and made plans for this season's activities.

The president, Mrs. Norbert Peterson, called for reports from the secretary and treasurer, Mrs. W. F. Crossett and Mrs. J. L. Chapman.

Miss Margaret Horan explained needs of the Visiting Nursing Association and Mrs. H. R. Fisher spoke for the Warren Relief Association. An explanation of needs of the Children's Aid Society was sent by Mrs. B. V. Lesser and Mrs. Althea N. Correll told what Girl Scouts of the county are making and doing for the Needlework Guild.

Announcement was made concerning the annual Garment Collection Day, which has been set for Friday, November 12, and Mrs. S. L. Myers was appointed chairman of the tea committee for that day.

VFW Auxiliary Is Continuing Work Among Veterans

At the regular meeting of VFW Auxiliary, the hospital chairman, Garnet Stewart, gave her report on the monthly visitation to the Warren State Hospital. There are now 55 war veterans there. They were given stationery, stamps, food and clothing. The officials in charge told the committee that the patients looked forward each month to this visit, and the auxiliary decided to make its next trip November 13th, and the second Saturday of each month hereafter, holding a Christmas party for the patients at the Christmas visitation.

Mrs. Sadie Lucie was installed as trustee for the next 18 months, having been elected at the last most recent meeting.

The auxiliary decided, since the two November meetings fall on holidays, to hold no meeting November 11. Instead, it will entertain the post at dinner and a dance on that date,, which is Armistice Day. The second meeting of the month coming on Thanksgiving, the date was set forward to November 23, and all members not present are asked to take note that the next regular meeting will be held on that date.

Attention of the auxiliary was called to a meeting of the Northwestern Counties Council at Franklin, November 7. Auxiliary delegates are to report to the men's meeting hall, where they will receive more definite information as to the location of the auxiliary meeting.

Annabel Pring was appointed chairman for the Armistice Day dinner which will be held on November 11 at 6:30. There will be a short program, and dancing afterward.

The auxxiliary voted to give to the United War Fund, whose campaign was closing that evening, and the secretary telephoned the campaign chairman at the Y.W. C.A. to report the donation. This in spite of the fact that the organization was not solicited.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the president, Catherine Allen, presented to Garnet Stewart a gift on behalf of the auxiliary, in appreciation of her loyal work in the "Series of Games" event which is sceduled each Wednesday night to raise funds for use in sending mailings to all service men of Warren county.

Annual Meeting Of DAC Chapter Is Very Busy One

Kanoagoa Chapter, Daughters of American Colonists, held its annual meeting in the YWCA with Miss Harriet Eaton as hostess. At one o'clock, after the board meeting, members and guests proceeded to the dining room where the regent, Miss Anna G. Snyder, and Miss Eaton presided over an inviting table centered with mums flanked by silver holders and tall candles in blue and gold, DAC colors. Mrs. F. C. Eaton gave thanks.

After the luncheon, Miss Snyder conducted the regular meeting. Mrs. Harold Hawkey, of Tidioute, led the flag salute, the American's Creed and pledge were given and Mrs. Eaton offered prayer. Mrs. Edwin Jack, accompanied by Miss Linnea Scott, sang "Thank God for a Garden."

In the absence of the recording secretary, Mrs. Wayne Branch, Mrs. Jessie Swain Girling read reports. It was shown the Grim Reaper had taken two members during the year: Mrs. Livingston Hunter, charter member, second national president of the organization, several times regent of the local chapter and active in the unit in other positions; Mrs. Joseph Schofield, Kanoagoa's second regent and, at the time of her passing, its chaplain. A beautiful memorial for Mrs. Schofield was read by Mrs. Tracy Greenlund, corresponding secretary, and members stood in silent tribute. A letter of appreciation was read from her son, Rev. Anderson Schofield. Most appropriately, Mrs. Jack sang "Good Bye."

Mrs. Eaton was appointed chaplain to fill the position left vacant by Mrs. Schofield's passing. The chapter gained one new member, Mrs. Girling, this year. The sum of $25 was voted to the War Fund and it was decided to omit the winter meeting due to transportation and other wartime difficulties.

Mrs. Branch's comprehensive report of the Pennsylvania state conference held in Erie October 22-23 contained much of interest. Kanoagoaa Chapter was honored in having on the state board Mrs. Robert Selden, of Norristown, who also represented the chapter at the general assembly held in New York April 24. Another member, Mrs. Hawkey, of Tidioute, the second vice president, is chairman of the national committee on correct use of the flag. Mrs. Wayne Branch was elected state corresponding secretary. Others attending the conference were Miss Snyder, regent; Mrs. Elbert Smith, delegate; Mrs. Branch, secretary and alternate, and Mrs. Girling.

To conclude, the highlight of the afternoon was Mrs. Hawkey's reading of several articles dealing with post-war problems, all calculated to make her listeners take serious notice of world events.

Montgomery Is In No Hurry For Angott

BY TED MEIER

New York, Nov. 2—(AP)—Sammy Angott, who beat Slugger White last week for the NBA lightweight boxing title, may have to wait a long time before he gets a crack at Philadelphia Bob Montgomery, who holds the crown in New York and Pennsylvania.

"The shoe's on the other foot now," explained Frankie Thomas, manager of Montgomery, after the Angott-White bout on the Pacific coast. "I would have been willing to fight White right away, but Angott can wait. When he held the title before did he give Bob a title bout? He did not."

In view of the fact that Angott holds three decisions over Montgomery in as many non-title scraps was it possible that Thomas had reason to fear a fourth match?

"No, no," said Thomas, chewing one of his favorite big cigars. "Angott beat the stuffing out of Bob at Madison Square Garden, but I think Bob won those other two. Do you remember the booing at Shibe Park when Angott got a split decision in their last fight? The gamblers were laying 20 to 1 after the fight was over, but before the decision was announced, that Bob would get the nod."

Thomas doesn't fear Beau Jack whom Montgomery meets in a return title bout at Madison Square Garden Nov. 19. In their first meeting last May, Montgomery, a 13 to 5 underdog, won easily.

Few Players Taken From The Minors

Chicago, Nov. 2—(AP)—The minor league baseball orchards apparently grew a bumper crop of lemons in 1943.

Yesterday, at the annual draft meeting, Major league baseball representatives completed their business of taking the best of the minor league pickings in 20 minutes. They chose 15 players. The average number drafted in past years was 20.

Only 12 of the 16 big league cuubs were represented at the meeting with Commissioner K. M. Landis and four of them—Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and the Chicago Cubs—did not file player claims.

The first selection in the draft was given to the New York Giants due to the absence of the Philadelphia Athletics. They chose Phil Weintraub, who is not a newcomer to the majors, having played with the Giants, Phillies and Cincinnati. His latest affiliation was with Tolado where he hit .334.

Other former big league players given new leases on their baseball life included Pitchers Ira Hutchinson, Al Epperly and Ewald Pyle; Infielder Eddie Mayo, and Outfielders Gil English and Edwin Carnett.

Chapter 13

BEFORE it was over, June eleventh proved to be quite a day. But when Sally met Mary McDermott for lunch over at the National Art Gallery, she had no inkling of the events that would mark the day in red letters for her.

"What have you been doing to yourself? You have beautiful circles under your eyes today," Mary greeted her. "Have you been burning the midnight oil?"

"You can call it that." Sally found she could mention the incident quite casually and almost humorously, now that Stewart had made his peace with her. She was careful not to identify Stewart, but Mary was quite matter-of-fact about the whole thing.

She said, "You run into situations like that in any office, but it's probably magnified here because the War Commission is so gigantic—and because so many business men are leading screwy lives. Their families are parked back in Buffalo or Denver or Oshkosh, and the men can't get home to see them very much. So all of a sudden perfectly upright family men find themselves living bachelor lives. Some one or other made a prediction the other day that the divorce rate in our fair city was going to soar. And it's nobody's fault but Hitler's. If I were the little woman back home in Kokomo, I'd hop right on a train and beat it for Washington, even if I had to live in a tent when I got here."

CONSIDERING Palmer Stewart a sociological question made the episode last night almost commonplace. Their talk turned to the dance at Fort Meade the following night.

"They'll all be enlisted men," Mary told her. "Take a look at their stripes and call them Corporal or Sergeant correctly, and you'll be a big hit."

Sally wondered who some of the others in the group might be. It was one way to meet some of her co-workers. She and Mary lingered over their lunch. The cafeteria was so subdued after the madhouse that was the War Commission restaurant that both of them felt refreshed. And the food was as reasonable as the other government-operated restaurants, and excellent as well.

As they went out the side door Sally looked a little wistfully at a family group coming in to see the paintings. There was so much to see in Washington, and so little time to see it. Sunday, instead of being a sightseeing day, had turned into the one breathing space in the whole week when Sally could get her clothes washed and pressed, her stockings mended, her hair shampooed, her nails manicured.

Sally stayed at the office till six, transcribing a long and highly technical conversation Langhorne had had with Rubber Reserve. Part of her job was to listen in on all important phone conversations and record them. For an absent-minded man, Langhorne was pretty astute. Sally had decided he was absent-minded only about the unimportant things; he had a memory like an elephant when it came to up-to-the-minute statistics on the rubber situation, which to Sally never stayed the same two days running.

It was raining when she left the office, a hard summer shower that came down so suddenly the sun barely had time to hide under a cloud. The decorative umbrella she kept in the office didn't do much good. Below the short jacket, Sally's new print dress was getting splashed.

SHE was standing on the safety aisle waiting for a chance to cross the busy intersection when the accident happened. A car, moving slowly enough down F Street behind a street car, skidded suddenly. It slid, jerked as the driver tried to regain control, then slithered inexorably onto the safety aisle. Sally watched, stunned, as men and women ran from the approaching menace. The aisle was not raised above street level, and there was nothing to stop the auto, gone suddenly berserk. Nothing, until with a sickening crash, it rammed into the side of another car on the curb side of the street. Glass flew all over the safety aisle, raining down on the three pedestrians who had not been able to get out of the path of the car.

Before she realized what she was doing, Sally was running across the street to the scene of the accident. The victims lay across the safety aisle at grotesque angles, looking somehow not like real people now that they had been struck down. As Sally ran up, one of them a woman with gray hair, raised herself on her elbow dazedly. But the other two were motionless. Oblivious of the pouring rain and the crowd already gathering, Sally knelt down by the injured. Fragments of the Nurses' Aide course kept running like a chant through her head.

One man, a workman in blue denims, had what looked like a scalp wound. A thin trickle of blood ran down his lined face. But it might be concussion, Sally thought. He was unconscious. The other man, of middle-age, with thin features, was groaning. At first, Sally couldn't see where he was injured. Then, as she lifted his hand to feel his pulse, blood spurted suddenly from his wrist. For a second Sally watched the bright jet, hypnotized. Then she realized a piece of flying glass, a deadly segment from the accident car's windshield, must have severed the artery. Whatever else was wrong with the man could wait. The bleeding must be checked instantly.

QUICKLY Sally reached down and yanked on her slip, ripping off a jagged piece. She twisted it tightly till it was wound round like a rope. Then she looked up at the gaping crowd around her. "Has anyone a pen knife?" A man behind her unhooked his from his watch chain, and handed it to her.

With one rapid motion she slit the coat and shirt sleeves of the accident victim, and pulled her improvised tourniquet around his arm just above the elbow.

She tied a knot, then twisted the pen knife handle tightly in the knot. The result was so spectacular that the crowd gasped. Almost instantly the stream of blood subsided to a mere trickle, then stopped entirely. Sally breathed a sigh of relief. It had worked.

State Voters Troop to Polls In Off-Year Election Which Attracts National Interest

(From Page One)

Elsewhere, Keystone voters chose mayors of 27 third class cities, and 48 county judges in 28 counties, while 10 communities voted on legalization of Sunday movies and three on Sunday sports.

A state-wide referendum was taken on a proposed amendment to the state constitution, empowering the legislature to set up a system of fixing election boundaries. They are fixed by county courts at present.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 2—(AP)—The voting was light today in western Pennsylvania with most interest in an off-year election centered in Allegheny and half a dozen other counties where leaders have been urging both Democrats and Republicans to "sweep in complete slates and prepare for 1944!"

Circulation of fake sample ballots designed to further split the Allegheny county Republicans caused some excitement yesterday and telegrams were dispatched by County Commissioner John S. Herron and Sheriff Robert J. Corbett telling district G. O. P. chairmen to "pay no attention" to sample ballots other than those sent from headquarters.

The fake sample ballots had suggested only one of the two Republican candidates for county commission, Corbett and Herron, be voted for.

Supporters of District Attorney Russell H. Adams, Republican incumbent, and State Senator John Fremont Cox, his Democratic opponent, carried their campaign fight right up to the finish line. The Republicans have a registration margin of about 77,000 to overcome in Allegheny county.

How many boys from

won't come back?

NOBODY knows the exact number. Nobody. But—

The number who do come back—on their own two feet instead of in a flag-draped box—will be in exact proportion to the job we do here at home.

For every minute that we can help shorten the war will mean more lives saved. (213 Americans were killed in the final day of the last war, and 1,114 were wounded before the 11:00 o'clock Armistice took effect.)

Now one way all of us can help shorten the war is to tighten our belts and buy more War Bonds. Yes, still more. And . . .

If you think you're buying all the War Bonds you are able to, imagine —for a minute—that it's after the war . .

. . . you're standing at the station . . . a bunch of home-town boys, still in uniform, climb off the train . . . one of them kisses his wife and grabs his kid in his arms . . .

. . . and then he turns to a young woman beside them, a girl who looks like his wife's sister, and you overhear him say . . .

"Catherine, I don't know how to tell you how sorry I am . . . it's such a shame about Joe . . . it makes me sick all over when I think how he'd be here today if the war had only ended a week sooner."

Think it over. Can't you buy a few more War Bonds to help end the war that week or month sooner? Sure, it may mean giving up something, but what's that compared to what they're giving up?

And remember, always—the money you "can't spare" may spare a soldier's life!

Hitler's Retreat Becoming a Rout

DISTURBANCES ARE REPORTED IN GERMANY

Swedish Rumors Say That a State of Emergency Has Been Imposed In Berlin

FIFTH ARMY ADVANCING

BY RICHARD McMURRAY
Associated Press War Editor

The German army, losing a fight for its very life in South Russia, reeled back in disordered retreat today to within 120 airline miles of Rumania as tenuous Swedish reports told of serious disturbances in Germany and the imposition of a state of emergency in Berlin and other cities.

The Crimea was bypassed and left far behind. Cossacks seized Skadovsk on the Black Sea, while the Red army was near Rumania and only 104 direct miles from Odessa. The Soviets were but 65 miles from Nikolaev at the mouth of the Bug river, toward which the beaten Germans apparently were retreating.

The Russian communique suggested the retreat was becoming a rout. It spoke in these terms: Enormous losses, several thousands Nazis drowned in the Dnieper at recaptured Kakhovka, large booty, large numbers of prisoners, surrounded enemy units completely annihilated.

The Germans still were counter-attacking at Krivoi Rog to hold open escape routes from the Dnieper bend. Within the Crimea, the situation was vague. Far to the north where the terrible Russian winter has started plains of ice and snow, the Russians said they captured a height of great importance near Vitebsk.

Reports of disorders inside Germany were printed in the Svenska Dagbladet of Stockholm, quoting travelers reaching Malmoe from Denmark. Stories of German unrest started circulating in Sweden a month ago; the Moscow conference was calculated by the Allies to stagged German morale further by ending any Hitlerian hope to divide and conquer. The Swedes said rigorous police control had been tightened through Germany. Austria was a focal point and Himmler was said to have reinforced his guards there.

Slow and painful advances were made by Allied armies in Central Italy. The American Fifth captured Pratella and Gallo, nine miles below the key German road center of Isernia, and continued their advance despite Nazi opposition, hardened by tanks. The Eighth Army bridged the Trigno river anew near the Adriatic and worked on the Germans with cannon. Enemy resistance pockets were reduced.

Civitavecchia, north of Rome, Aquila and Ancona on the Adriatic were bombed. The latter city was said by the Swiss "no longer to exist."

Lt. Gen. Carl Spaatz' new whipsay 15th U. S. airforce announced the destruction of at least 30 German planes yesterday in its initial raid on the Messerschmitt plane works at Wiener Neustadt, 27 miles south of Vienna. The formation of the 15th meant the number of bombers at Italian bases had been increased greatly; that Spaatz was ready to match aerial blows at Germany with the 8th Air Force based in Britain. Weather will favor Spaatz.

Yugoslav partisans divided their time in fighting the Germans and the Yugoslav war minister, Gen.

U. S. S. Lafayette Towed to Drydock

New York, Nov. 3—(AP)—The former French liner Normandie, now the U. S. S. Lafayette, was moved from its North River pier at the foot of 48th street today for the first time since the war began.

A swarm of tugboats pulled the giant 83,000-ton hulk to a drydock where it will be fitted out for naval service.

The removal climaxed more than a year of salvage work by hundreds of men since the ship was swept by fire and capsized at her pier on February 6, 1942 while being converted for military service.

Aboard the vessel when the last line was cut loose at 10:10 a. m., were 200 civilian employes of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, 90 Coast Guardsmen, 25 salvage men and several naval officials.

As the ship moved downstream, one line to a tugboat snapped, but this did not impede the craft's movement, as 19 other tugs were pulling

Warren county on Tuesday experienced perhaps the most quiet election in its history. The vote cast was light, as most of the primary results had settled contests for the majority of the offices in the county. Only the Democratic commissioner fight won any special attention in the balloting. William Olney, the present incumbent, was opposed by John O. Hanna and both had waged a vigorous campaign. Unofficial returns indicate Hanna's nomination by 129 votes.

The weather yesterday, coupled with the lack of interest in the result, sent but a small fraction of the voters to the polls. At the Times-Mirror office, where returns were received, so little interest was evinced and so few inquiries were received that the office was closed early in the evening.

Results today indicate that, as usual, the GOP vote dominated the county results and unofficial totals for the various offices are as follows:

800 Italians Held By Nazis Are Set Free

London, Nov. 3—(AP)—Eight hundred Italians held by the Germans have been freed from a prison camp by Yugoslav partisan troops in the course of heavy fighting in Montenegro, Gen. Josip (Tito) Broz' Free Yugoslav radio said today.

The communique also told of continued fighting with Gen. Draja Mihailovic's forces in Serbia in which a Chetnic commander was said to have been killed.

German attacks aimed at Tuzla in eastern Bosnia were declared to have been repulsed, while Nazi forces were also said to have been beaten back with heavy losses in a futile attempt to capture Breznica in Croatia. The communique also claimed unspecified successes against the Germans in Dalmatia and the Croatian province of Lika.

"Allied aviation" was credited in the communique with attacks on the German-held port of Ploce and Metkovic and German positions on the Pelyesac peninsula between Split and Dubrovnik.

Japanese Hint At Showdown For Rabaul

Niponnese Sea Force Is Intercepted and Forced To Turn Back

REPORTS ARE AWAITED

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters, Nov. 3—(AP)—The Japanese, whose Bougainville air bases were paralyzed by naval guns and plane bombs as the Allies invaded that last big Solomons Island of the enemy, already have hinted at naval and air battles to come in the showdown struggle before Rabaul.

General MacArthur's headquarters said today that, after the marines stormed ashore on Bougainville's west coast Monday at dawn to capture Empress Augusta Bay, a Japanese cruiser and destroyer force was intercepted Monday night, fought and turned back by Allied warships before they could reach the invasion scene.

Headquarters added that complete reports were awaited on the battle which might go far toward determining the ability of the Allied landing force to control Bougainville's west coast.

It was also disclosed that, after the naval battle, Japanese planes attacked the Allied warships and caused minor damage before they

By FLORA LEWS

Washington, Nov. 3—(AP)—Complete long-term military occupation of Germany and destruction of all major German armaments industries after the war were among the possibilities mentioned in speculation here today on what was decided at the Moscow conference.

It is known that the United States delegation favored a plan to occupy all the larger cities in Germany and to paralyze the German war potential.

How far the foreign ministers reached definite agreement on those points has not been disclosed, but the communique issued at the conclusion of their meeting said the question of Germany's future had been taken up.

Main problems facing the Allies on how to deal with Germany after the surrender are:

"1. When to deal with and whether to allow the continuance of any German government.

2. How to divide up the responsibility of occupation.

Partitioning Germany into zones of Russian, British, American and other Allied occupation spheres has been suggested, but the United States view, it was learned, is that the matter should be handled by an Allied commander-in-chief, perhaps under a joint commission.

Establishment of the advisory council to deal with Italy set a pattern for the type of committee which may be formed for Germany. It was announced at Moscow that those questions which were not finally decided were referred to commissions created to study them.

COAL DIGGERS UNHEED PLEA OF PRESIDENT

WORKERS SKEPTICAL

By the Associated Press

Washington, Nov. 3—President Roosevelt's directive to the nation's coal miners to return today to their jobs in the struck workings, now under government-seizure, was generally ignored in the major producing states this morning.

The quiet suspension of activity, began two weeks ago in scattered wildcat walkouts stemming from continued absence of a working contract, spread to an estimated 460,000 hard and soft coal miners as conferences looking to some settlement went forward here between United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis and Interior Secretary Ickes, again designated as federal overseer of the pits.

An early morning survey in Pennsylvania, a top producer of both anthracite and bituminous coal, showed no signs of a back to work movement in response to the president's appeal. Only a few soft coal strip mines were reported working in western Pennsylvania, but Byron H. Canon, executive secretary of the Operators' Association, suggested the failure of general resumptions to develop might be due in part to delays in receipt of formal notices of government seizure.

In West Virginia, there were no early reports of any mine crews going back to the pits in 600 commercial operations, although a few non-union mines and some strip mines were turning out some small amounts of coal. A Logan county union spokesman said 10 county locals had sent telegrams to President Roosevelt, Lewis and the War Labor Board stating they

Philadelphia, Nov. 3—(AP)—Seven municipalities in Pennsylvania voted in favor of Sunday movies and one decided to continue the ban on them.

Greenville, in Mercer county, which now prohibits Sunday shows, voted against opening theatres on the Sabbath.

Voting in favor of Sunday performances were Laureldale, Berks county; Wyalusing and Athens, Bradford count; Monroe township, Cumberland county; Carmichaels, Greene county; Boswell, Somerset county, and Port Carbon, Schuylkill county.

All except Port Carbon now prohibit Sunday shows.

Mild Interest Is Indicated In Amendment

Philadelphia, Nov. 3—(AP)—A proposed amendment to the state constitution giving the legislature power to set up uniform machinery to fix election district boundaries received a substantial majority in a cross-section tabulation today of the state-wide vote cast in yesterday's election.

The vote in 3839 of 8192 precincts in the state was 83,447 for the amendment and 71,733 against it. The tabulation contained 466 of Allegheny's 1017 precincts.

The amendment was carried on a separate ballot and the vote on it was uniformly smaller than that cast for major party candidates. In some counties, including Philadelphia, no unofficial tabulation of the amendment vote was made.

Other counties from which the vote was unreported included, Beaver, Chester, Columbia, Delaware, Fayette, Indiana, Jefferson, Mercer Montour Somerset, Warren and Washington.

The amendment was backed by the general assembly's Local Government Commission. The present constitution gives election district boundary fixing power to county courts.

Oakes' Widow Testifies In Bahamas Trial

A DRAMATIC RECITAL

By E. V. W. JONES

Nassau, Bahamas, Nov. 3—(AP)—In the silence of a crowded courtroom gripped by the drama of the moment, the widow of Sir Harry Oakes told in tones sometimes halting, sometimes firm today of a family break which followed Alfred De Marigny's marriage to the daughter of the man he now is accused of killing.

Even the red-robed, white-wigged chief justice dropped his voice while Lady Eunice Oakes testified in the Bahamas supreme court against her dashing, twice-divorced son-in-law, who is charged with bludgeoning and burning the multi-millionaire Sir Harry to death last July.

"We tried to make the best of a bad situation," the mourning-clad broken woman said, after the handsome defendant married red-haired Nancy Oakes, then 18 years old.

But Nancy became pregnant even before she recovered from a near-fatal attack of typhoid fever, Lady Oakes related and Sir Harry's resentment caused ill feeling between the Baronet and De Marigny.

She said that Nancy stuck with her husband and moved away from her family.

Then, and the witness' voice now was firm and cold, De Marigny even wrote to the eldest Oakes' son, Sir Sidney, "the most diabolical letter a man could write to a child of 25 about his parents."

As a result of the bitter feeling, said the widow, who remained dry-eyed until the very end of her testimony, "we both changed our wills in February to protect the children against themselves until their arrival at the state of discretion."

Preference to Keep Judges Is Revealed

Philadelphia, Nov. 3—(AP)—Voters of Pennsylvania showed a preference to keep judges for another term, returns from yesterday's election showed today.

Thirty-one judges were re-elected 27 of them with endorsement of both major parties. Judges are the only candidates who may run on more than one ticket in the state.

Where there were contests, Republicans won four judicial posts and the Democrats three. Each party re-elected two judges over opposition.

A Democrat judge, W. Wallace Smith, of Clearfield, was defeated. The voters elected F. Cortz Bell, Republican, to succeed him.

Others of the 48 county judgeships at stake were undecided.

AUTO STRIKES PARKED TRUCK AT STONEHAM

James Richard Anderson, 17, Dies at Hospital of Fractured Skull Soon After Accident

DRIVER [illegible]GHTLY HURT

James Richard Anderson, 17, 405 Radeker street, Sheffield died in the Warren General Hospital last night at 11:30 of injuries sustained in an automobile crash at Stoneham at 6:30 last evening. Gregory Gilotti, 28, of Oak [illegible]eet, Kane, also in the accident was given emergency treatment at the hospital for head cuts and bruises about the chest.

Anderson was hitch-hiking to Warren to bid farewell to a young soldier who was leaving on the eastbound evening train and had been picked up at Sheffield by the Kane man. At Stoneham the Chevrolet sedan driven by Gilotti struck a parked truck. The truck loaded with coal was driven by Wylie Helm, 25, of Saybrook and he had stopped to act as a good Samaritan to a dog that had been struck by a car. The car which had hit the dog had failed to stop and Helm stopped his truck with two wheels off the pavement and went to give aid to the dog.

Gilotti in telling his story of the accident to the State Police, who investigated the affair, said he was driving along at a fair rate of speed and did not see the parked truck until within about 30 feet of it. Another car was approaching and he could not pass the truck. Applying his brakes at attempted to stop but could not do so and the crash followed.

Anderson was brought to the hospital in an ambulance and was given treatment. He had a fracture of the skull back of the left ear, a basic fracture of the skull and suffered severe hemorrhages.

The Chevrolet sedan which Gilotti was driving was badly damaged on the left side and the front of the car was badly twisted and torn and the damage is estimated at $300. The big International coal truck, loaded with coal, had the frame spring and an axle bent.

The body of the young man who died was removed to the Lutz Funeral home.

Coroner Ed C. Lowrey gave permission to move the body to the undetraking rooms and joined the state police in the investigation.

James Richard Anderson was born in Warren 17 years ago, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Axel An-

27 Cities In State Choose New Mayors

Philadelphia, Nov. 3.—(AP)—Republicans elected 20 mayors of third class cities to the Democrats' five in yesterday's municipal elections.

The returns today also returned Socialist J. Henry Stump at the head of Reading's city government.

One contest of the 27 mayoralty races remained in doubt. At Easton Mayor Joseph Morrison, Democrat, and Russell J. Morrison, Republican, were running neck and neck. They are no relation.

Twelve Republican mayors and four Democratic chief executives were re-elected.

The voters' ax fell on four Democratic executives and one Republican.

Among mayors elected were: (x—incumbent.)

DuBois—x-William L. Hoover, Rep.

Erie—x-Charles Barber, Rep.

New Castle—John F. Haven, Rep.

Oil City—x-John G. Payne, Rep.

Titusville—x-Peter J. Hoenig, Rep.

Democrats Beaten In New York, New Jersey and Penn'a

Acting Mayor Samuel of Philadelphia Is Elected To Regular Term Over Former Ambassador to Russia, William Bullitt

VOTING IN SEVEN STATES HEAVIER THAN EXPECTED

By the Associated Press

Triumphant in key eastern seaboard contests, Republicans viewed the off-year election returns today as a signpost on the road which they hope will lead back to the White House in 1944.

Voting, heavier than expected in seven states in view of the absentees—in uniform and in war factories—yielded these results:

New York—Republican Joe R. Hanley was elected lieutenant governor over Democrat William N. Haskell, retired lieutenant general, by more than 300,000 majority. Governor Thomas E. Dewey and Wendell Willkie actively supported Hanley; President Roosevelt and James E. Farley backed Haskell, although the president's support was confined to a vote cast at his Hyde Park home.

New Jersey.—Former Senator Walter Edge, Republican, defeated Vincent J. Murphy, Newark's Democratic mayor for the governorship despite a better than 100,000 majority for Murphy piled up in the Hague-dominated Jersey City area

Pennsylvania—Acting Mayor Bernard Samuel of Philadelphia, Republican, was elected to a regular term in that office over the Democratic candidate, William C. Bullitt, formen ambassador to Russia and to France, for whom President Roosevelt had spoken a good word. The state continued Republican.

Kentucky—This normally Democratic state produced a real horse race for governor with Republican Simeon Willis trailing Democrat J. Lyter Donaldson by only a few thousand votes with hundreds of districts uncounted.

Harrison Spangler, Republican national chairman, saw in these returns a death blow to any fourth term movement for Mr. Roosevelt. State after state, he declared, has "rebuffed the new deal."

Hanley's majority in the New York contest—far greater than Dewey himself was able to pile up last year against a split field—was considered a more than ordinary tribute to the governor. The Republicans fought the campaign on Dewey's record as executive.

Dewey's organization got in some surprising licks in New York City where the governor first made his name as a racket-busting prosecutor. The Democrats carried the city as usual but only by a fraction of the majority they generally hurl against the upstate Republican vote.

Edge's election in New Jersey gives the G. O. P. a majority of the governorships for the first time since 1928. With his inauguration in January, the party will have 25 of the 48 state executives. This would put the Republicans in control of every populous state outside the "solid south" except Indiana.

New England also yielded some interesting mayoral campaigns. For the first time since 1933 Hartford, Conn., elected a republican mayor, William H. Mortensen. Bridgeport gave Socialist Jasper McLevy his sixth term.

Taylor Claims Victories In 50 of State's 67 Counties

Philadelphia, Nov. 3—(AP)—Republicans tightened their 62-year grip on Philadelphia's municipal affairs today, beating off a Democratic challenge by William C. Bullitt, who ran with the approval of the White House, by electing Bernard Samuel to a four-year term as mayor.

With only five districts missing, the vote was: Bullitt, 278,906; Samuel, 342,388; Julius C. Abercauph, Independent, 4,212.

The size of Samuel's plurality exceeded the most optimistic predictions of his backers. Democratic hopes had been built upon an apparent weakening of the Republican machine last year, when the G.O.P. carried the city by only 157 votes in a gubernatorial election.

President Roosevelt came to the defense of Bullitt, former U. S. ambassador to Russia and France, in the closing stages of the campaign, characterizing pamphlets criticizing the Democratic candidate's diplomatic record as "a mass of falsehoods."

Samuel hailed the result as a triumph for "home rule." He said the voters had "served notice that they are capable of selecting municipal officers without outside assistance."

In conceding defeat Bullitt said he was sorry he lost because "I consider the issues involved vital to the welfare of our people."

Abercauph, Voters League candidate, said "Philadelphia has made it clear that it wants no Munich man in office."

Victories in local contests in 50 of the state's 67 counties were claimed for the Republicans by their state chairman, M. Harvey Taylor, who said the returns "indicate what is going to happen next year and good Democrats better get out of the way."

In Allegheny county (Pittsburgh), however, the Democrats rolled up their usual pluralities, smashing hopes of Republicans to capture several county posts.

Republicans apparently retained the congressional seat of Rep. James E. Van Zandt, who resigned to enter the navy. The vote in 171 of the 23d District's 288 precincts gave: D. Emmert Brumbaugh, Republican, 16,223; Miss Edna Marsden, Democrat, 11,640.

In Pennsylvania's only statewide election, Judge Claude T. Reno was elected to a full 10-year term on the superior court bench, to which he was appointed a year ago.

With 6,081 precincts out of 8,192 reporting, Reno led his Democratic opponent, Common Pleas Judge Curtis Bok of Philadelphia, 958,816 to 722,026.

Incomplete returns indicated approval of a proposed constitutional amendment empowering the state legislature, rather than the county courts, to fix election district boundaries.

Adams Only G.O.P. Winner In Allegheny Co. Contests

Pittsburgh, Nov. 3—(AP)—District Attorney Russell H. Adams, Republican, was relected in a late upsurge of ballots from outlying Alegheny county precincts today on the basis of nearly complete returns from yesterday's voting in which the county board of commissioners was also re-elected.

Returns from 991 precincts out of 1017 precincts gave Adams 185,909 votes compared to 178,474 for John Fremont Cox.

In contrast to Republican victories in most other western Pennsylvania counties, the Democrats of Allegheny were successful in nearly all of the other county contests.

The Democrat commissioners, John J. Kane, and George Rankin, Jr., got a smashing majority, and the Republicans accorded the party nominee, John S. Herron, a substantial lead over Sheriff Robert J. Corbett, Republican, for the third seat on the board.

In the district attorneyship race Adams appeared to be a beaten man when the city of Pittsburgh gave his Democratic opponent, State Senator John Fremont Cox, a majority of 17,000 last night, but the incumbent took the lead today as votes poured in from the boroughs and townships.

In the county commissionership contest, only the size of the Democratic majority remained to be decided once the votes started to come in.

Democrats swept most of the judiciary contests in the balloting, apparently toppling two sitting judges who were seeking re-election on the Republican ticket—Orphans Judge James Milholland and County Judge Roy T. Clunk. The Democrats also swept all their incumbent Pittsburgh city officials into office.

The thermometer on the corner of the Metzger-Wright building nearly blew its top-piece when the temperature zoomed after the Final Report Meeting of the Campaign last Friday. The mercury catapulted upward, not even pausing at the big "Goal" figures of $88,700, but pushing past all captioned totals. Final audited results will be somewhere between $92,000 and $93,000; largest amount raised in any Warren county campaign in more than a quarter of a century.

Fine Program For The Blue Stockings

Blue Stocking Club members were entertained Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Edith Smith, Pennsylvania avenue, west, with Mrs. Harriet Wilkins assisting. Mrs. Vance Weld conducted the business session in the absence of President Ethel Morris.

A large group assembled to hear the program by Mrs. A. C. Flick, Jr., who reviewed and read from Stephen Vincent Benet's "Western Star", story of a people on the move to the west. This was to have been the first in a saga but Mr. Benet died last March and had only completed this story of the first settlers from England to Plymouth Rock. It is beautifully written in blank verse.

To conclude, tea was served, with Mrs. Florence Tillotson and Mrs. F. L. Plummer presiding.

The next meeting will be held November 16 at the home of Mrs. P. S. Tarbox, with Mrs. George Calderwood assisting.

Youth Leaders Hear Experts On Recreation

Meeting here last evening with representatives of a number of local groups serving youth of the community, two field representatives of the National Recreation Association outlined proposed and established activities in towns comparable to Warren.

The informal meeting, held at the YWCA activities building, was arranged so that local youth leaders might have an opportunity to hear and confer with Charles Taylor and J. B. Williams, who have just completed the task of assisting Bradford in its setting up of a recreational program and establishment of a recreation center.

The group assembled named Olive A. Huff as its chairman and voted to hold another meeting in the near future, when all persons interested in community recreation for young people are invited to help work out a plan for local coordinated activities.

TARENTUM PAPER FREEZES CIRCULATION

Tarentum, Pa., Nov. 3—(AP)—Because of the newsprint shortage the Valley Daily News has frozen its circulation at the present figure and notified contract advertisers their lineage this year must not exceed that of last year.

In a front-page statement announcing the move, the paper said it would "continue serve all present subscribers." New subscriptions will be accepted on a priority basis, and non-contract advertising will be accepted as space permits, the announcement said.

Just SCRAPS

It's a dark lowering morning. To the South the clouds hang low over the nearest hills, so that their tops are obscured and almost invisible. At 10 a. m. it is as dark as night, and lights are turned on in the stores. A thin drizzle of rain lies like a veil over the valley. To the west, mean and angry clouds are rolling toward the town. A threatening wind has arisen and it may be we are about to have one of those rare but very violent windstorms. Perhaps this is the final bow of the departing Autumn, and by tomorrow winter may be upon us with a lash and a snarl, and with those muscular arms full snow and sleet. Such is our valley on the morning of November 2, 1943.

✣ ✣ ✣ ✣ ✣

But, no matter what the weather, no matter how bleak the skies, the war must go on; and Warren county's part in that war must go on as well. Across the iron bridge, nosing its way through the mist and semi-darkness of this strange morning, a freight train is puffing eastward. Perhaps it contains products manufactured by Warren county plants for the war machine. Perhaps it contains scrap metal or other salvage items. Not for one minute can this county, or any county in these wide United States, relax its effort to keep the fires roaring in the nation's foundries; to keep the scrap moving from farm to town, from town to freight car, from freight car to factory. It is as simple as all that, but it must not stop; it must not even pause.

✣ ✣ ✣ ✣ ✣

Have you seen the display window in the Pennsylvania Electric Company devoted to the Salvage program and to this phase of Warren county's part in the war? This window has been created through the efforts of Fire Chief Kropf, who is always willing to give up his time to war projects, and W. T. Corbett, chairman of the County Salvage Committee. Chief Kropf, incidentally, is one of only seven men in Warren county who has received the insignia of the State Council of Defense indicating that he has given 3,000 hours of work to the war effort. W. T. Corbett is another one of those seven key men.

The window contains samples of each kind of salvage material. It contains also samples of the many kinds of war-related materials made in the county: 37 mm gun barrel, 37 mm shells, engine cuppler, gears for various kinds of war equipment, and similar items. This display is very much worth your while; you should see it.

✣ ✣ ✣ ✣ ✣

On Thursday of last week at the Pleasant Grange, Pleasant Township, went all-out on a chicken dinner with 80 guests. This active community, just on the outskirts of Warren, is always upmost in any phase of war activity. Glen Kiser, leader of this group, presided over the long tables garnished with Hallowe'en decorations. W. T. Corbett spoke on the salvage activities and needs in Warren county, and presented Mr. Kiser with the prized service insignia of the State Council for 500 hours of volunteer work.

M. H. Hetrick of the Pittsburgh branch of the U. S. Army Ordnance Department gave an interesting outline of the activities of the Department and the need for all types of salvage. Miss Dale Holcomb sang two pleasing solos, and two reels of war pictures were shown. The after-dinner meeting was attended by about 125 people.

Milk Producers Can Get Payment

Warren County milk producers who wish to receive payments under the Dairy Feed Payment Program should save evidence of milk and butterfat sales for presentation in applying for such payments, according to W. L. Armitage, Chairman of the County AAA Committee. The rate of payment for Pennsylvania dairy producers will be 40 cents per hundredweight for whole milk deliveries and 5 cents per pound of butterfat sold in cream and butter. The butterfat test or the utilization of the milk will not affect the payment for whole milk delivered.

Application for payment on October milk deliveries should be made to the County AAA Committee betwween November 1 and 30. Locations throughout the County, convenient for the producer to make application for the dairy feed adjustment payment will be announced later.

CIGARETTES SCARCE

During the past few days there have been times when certain brands of cigarettes could not be bought in Warren which had led many to ask, "are we in for a nation-wide cigarette famine?" The current shortage should be temporary, according to expert opinion, but next year's prospects are not so reassuring. Factors contributing to the stringency are: 1—panic buying; 2—enormous orders for overseas Christmas presents; 3—"Big Five" manufacturers placing jobbers on a quota basis. Then, too, fifty billion more cigarettes have been smoked this year than can be rolled from the 1945 tobacco crop.

NEWSPAPERS SET RECORD

The United States Treasury Department has compiled an interesting set of figures on the work done by the newspapers of the country in their handling of the Second and Third War Loans. They have carefully checked all of the papers relative to their free use of space in advertising the loans. The Advertising Checking Bureau has compiled the figures and it shows that in the Second War Loan the Times-Mirror had 16,037 inches of space worth $801.85 and in the Third Loan drive 14,424 inches of space were used worth $721.20. In all approximately 118,000,000 inches of advertising was run by the newspapers of the nation.

DYNAFUEL

is Sunoco's great contribution to United Nations' mastery of the skies

50% more powerful than U. S. standard 100-octane test fuel

It's not by chance that United Nations' fliers have won such complete mastery of the air. Our men are better trained—their planes are better armed—aiming devices and bombsights are unexcelled.

But another factor of tremendous importance is the fighting fuel that powers our planes. Every week, millions of gallons of high-octane aviation fuel flow from Sunoco refineries to the battlefronts of the world.

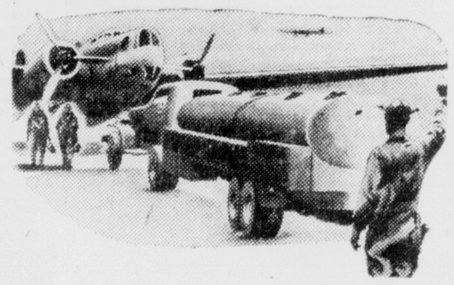
The high quality as well as the huge quantity of our output has been made possible largely by Dynafuel—an exclusive development of Sunoco engineers and chemists.

What is Dynafuel?

Dynafuel is more than a gasoline. It is a super aviation fuel concentrate, made entirely from petroleum and specially processed in order to produce the greatest possible power.

What Makes Dynafuel so Powerful?

It contains a larger percentage of certain ingredients which have extraordinary power-producing qualities. That is why Dynafuel tests 50% higher in power than U. S. standard 100-octane test fuel.



Do Our Fighters and Bombers Fly on Pure Dynafuel?

No—Sunoco Dynafuel is never used undiluted but is blended with gasolines that are produced by other methods, in order to step up their quality.

Thereby, Dynafuel also helps make available greater quantities of aviation fuel that meets highest military specifications—the high-octane fuel which enables the fighters and bombers of the United Nations to fly faster, range farther, climb higher than ever before, and to carry heavier loads of bombs.

Is Dynafuel Being Produced in Large Quantities Now?

Yes—the Dynafuel Process is an important factor in Sunoco's huge production of 100-octane aviation fuel; it utilizes even those portions of the crude which formerly went only into low-grade fuels.

Will Dynafuel Be Available for Automobiles?

Right now, every drop of Dynafuel is reserved for military use. But when peace comes, the same processes and equipment which have contributed so greatly to the war will bring to motorists a new, more powerful fuel for their automobiles.

Dynafuel was developed by Sunoco without government aid or subsidy. The company risked its own capital, its own credit, in order to pay the huge costs of building the plants for its production.

It is through such free play of private initiative that all American progress has been achieved.

Mark Clark—Man of Invasions

LEAN, 6-foot-2-inch Mark Wayne Clark, currently conquering Italy with his U. S. Fifth Army, augmented by British, Canadians, and French, is at 47 the youngest lieutenant-general in American Service. Born at a New York Army post, the Army has been his life, his disciplinarian personality. But war has made him spectacular. In 1940 he was a lieutenant-colonel; his present rank represents four of the hardest kinds of promotions higher. In the spring of 1942 General Eisenhower called him to England to command all ground forces in the European theater. That autumn the Americans were ready to move. So Clark led a group of other daring officers on that most amazing of Odysseys in modern military history—the secret plane-auto-submarine-small boat-foot mission to enemy-held North Africa to plot the American invasion with French General Giraud's staff. The exploit is credited with saving thousands of American lives by obtaining information and promise of only a token resistance. Clark lost $13,000 in gold when his boat capsized, but he captured the three stars of a lieutenant-general. Now in Italy, Salerno behind, Rome ahead, the sharp-featured, dark-eyed young commander is proving his ability in the field. He has a daughter, 17, a son, 18; the latter—in West Point—being the fourth generation of army Clarks.

"SCRAPE FOR SCRAP"

While it is being found necessary to "scrape for scrap" to meet the increasing demands of the steel industry, efforts of citizens cooperating in the Victory Scrap Drive are beginning to produce results.

When the Victory Scrap Drive started the outlook was very dark and is not yet light enough to warrant optimism, the Advisory Committee on Salvage of the State Council of Defense reports, but adds that the situation is showing definite signs of improvement.

Early returns indicate an increase in the enthusiasm necessary to the success of the campaign, according to the committee, but it warns that the goal is not yet reached and much work is yet to be done and many thousands of tons of iron and steel scrap must yet be located if the armed forces of the nation are to be furnished the arms and ammunitions they need for victory.

Should the quota of scrap not be reached it would be Pennsylvania's first home front failure, it was declared, and would be the first time that the citizens of the Keystone State have let down the boys who are fighting for them.

Today, each individual American soldier requires an average of 4,900 pounds of steel, in the form of carried or supported equipment. In World War I a soldier needed 90 pounds. Project this figure to include an army of ten to thirteen million men. Add to it the astronomical tonnages of steel blown to bits as explosives from which no scrap is recovered. Add to that the steel being used to produce cargo and warships at a rate the world has never seen before. Top it off with the feverish building and expansion of new war plants, shipyards, factories, and suddenly it is found that the present record steel-making capacity of almost 98,00,000 tons a year must be lifted by millions of tons to clinch the Victory.

Salvage is a job for every Pennsylvanian to do, the committee explains. Governor Martin has emphasized the importance of it. He has said that the drive must not fail. Dr. Ralph Cooper Hutchison, executive director of the Council of Defense, and Mrs. Worthington Scranton, commander of Civilian War Services, both have pointed out that the gathering of scrap is a job that must be done and done right now.

CHRISTMAS—IN NOVEMBER

The following letter from the Office of the Postmaster General was received at the local post office today:

To Postmaster, Warren, Pa.:

I ask your cooperation and through you that of business concerns and the public in meeting a postal problem that is far more serious than ever before.

We have handled the Christmas parcels for our Army forces overseas. We now face the tremendous task of receiving, transporting and delivering on time the vast volume of Christmas mail for our people at home. There is only one solution to that problem: "Christmas Gifts Generally Must Be Mailed in November." There can be no assurance, in view of the unavoidable handicaps of war, that gifts and cards mailed within the last two weeks preceding Christmas will be delivered on time. Many people, last year, who did not mail within the time specified by the Post Office Department learned with regret that their friend did not receive the gifts and cards until after Christmas. The only way in which delivery of Holiday mail can be made on time is by spreading the mailings over a longer period so that the limited amount of available transportation and experienced postal personnel can be used during more weeks. Holiday mail must be so arranged that its dispatch will not impede the movement of war materials, armed forces nor military mail.

Postmasters are therefore requested to bring to the attention of their patrons this warning: The War Has Dislocated the Christmas Mailing Season. This Year, November Is the Time for Mailing Christmas Gifts and Cards. Gifts Should Be Marked "DO NOT OPEN UNTIL CHRISTMAS."

(Signed) Frank C. Walker,
Postmaster General.

PRICE PRIMER

Higher accountancy is needed if you are a conscientious housewife who has signed a Home Front Pledge to pay no more than ceiling prices.

As price regulations multiply, and more foods go on rationing, it would be helpful to have a simple booklet giving points and ceiling prices. It also becomes more difficult to work out a plan for such a booklet, because there are different ceilings in different parts of the country, and invarious types of stores. Therefore, as much as you need it, you may not see a price handbook for some time.

After reviewing the results of elections in eastern seaboard states Tuesday, looks as if next year's campaign will be more exciting than many had anticipated.

Looks like the president will have to get out the "big stick" to get those miners back into the pits

Washington In Wartime

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — In Congress now hearings are being held before the Subcommittee on War Contract Terminations of the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

It is one of those subjects generally considered dull as dishwater. Although labor and industry are interested mightily, they aren't particularly "het up" about it and to much of the public "contract termination" is only a vague term that isn't worth a second thought.

That it's worth more than a second and even third thought becomes obvious with the realization that a sloppy, inept policy of contract terminations could wreck industry when war draws to a close and bring unprecedented unemployment, industrial chaos and depression.

It's the fear of that very thing that slows down the industrial war effort every time we win victories and it appears that our enemies may be crushed within a few months. No industrialist wants to be caught napping when peace comes and those who can get out of the production of war goods and into the production of civilian goods soonest are going to skim the cream from that lush vat of savings being held against the day when we can buy all the things we want to buy.

IN order to do that, they are going to have to wind up their war business with Uncle Sam speedily and without loss of working capital. That's what "contract termination" means but its magnitude can only be appreciated when you look at the facts.

It's a cinch now that there isn't going to be any single V-day when all our enemies will fold up at once as they did in 1918.

But if there were such a day, there would be between fifty and 75 billion dollars of unfinished business between Uncle Sam and war industries. This would involve something like 250,000 primary contracts and more than 5,000,000 subcontractors.

On many of them, Uncle Sam can merely say we don't want that now. But in many instances he can't say that without wrecking the producer who may have millions tied up in raw materials and overhead, and without throwing hundreds of communities into an unemployment panic as management scurries to financial cover by firing millions.

In addition, it is estimated that industry would have around fifteen billions tied up on partially completed contracts. The problem arises of how best Uncle Sam can dodge taking delivery of tanks, planes, guns, etc., which are no longer good for anything but the junk pile, without leaving the manufacturers holding the sack.

THERE has already been testimony introduced that some of our biggest producers, some employing as many as 50,000 men, are operating on such narrow margins of working capital that they couldn't go on for more than a week or two if the Government suddenly should say we want no more of your product.

Thought of in those terms, "contract termination" becomes one of the vital issues of today. It is one peacetime issue that must be decided while war is going on. To delay might cause far greater waste than any the economy minded Congressmen are talking about today.

Stamp News

LIECHTENSTEIN, the little principality located in central Europe between Germany and Switzerland, has added the final four stamps to its "Princes set" started December 18, 1941. Latest of the pictorial stamps are: 20-rappen, dark red, bearing the portrait of Prince Alois II, whose reign dated from 1836 to 1858; 30-r, dark blue, Prince John II (1858-1929); one franc, bistre gray, Prince Franz (1929-1933), and 1.50-f, dark green, Prince Franz-Joseph II, present ruler. The stamps were released July 5 of this year and are good for postage until March 31, 1944.

Four earlier stamps in the same set have just reached this country although they were issued in October 1942. Values, colors and subjects are: 20-r, red, Prince Johann Karl (1732-1748); 30-r, blue, Prince Franz Joseph I (1772-1781); 1-f, red violet, Prince Alois I, (1781-1805) and 1.50-f dark brown, Prince Johann I (1805-1836).

Additional details of the new Free Poland set and illustrations of the eight stamps are now available from the Polish Telegraph Agency. Colors are: 5 groszy, red; 10-g, green; 25-g, violet; 55-g, blue; 75-g, red brown; 80-g, magenta; 1 zloty, dark olive, and 1z50g, black. The stamps are engraved and unwatermarked. Inscriptions on the 80-g are "Polish Army in the Middle East" (top), "Gen. Sikorski" (left side), and "June, 1943" (right side). The 1z50g stamp, paying tribute to Poland's underground forces bears the inscription across the top, "The Secret Press in Poland."

Although many of its colonies were already aligned with the Free French cause, the Vichy French government issued in January, 1942, a total of 88 stamps for its various colonial possessions. Representing some 24 sets of from three to four stamps, the issues have now reached this country through neutral sources. The designs are colorful, and differ according to colony. It is extremely doubtful whether many of the stamps ever reached the colonies for whose use they were intended.

Two other Vichy French issues also have been disclosed. One is a four franc blue commemorating the 200th anniversary of the birth in 1743 of Anton Lavoisier, French scientist, and bearing his portrait. The second is a 20 franc green horizontal-type stamp portraying Lake Lerie with mountains in the background and grazing cattle in the foreground.

A new 1.50-f red issue of French Morocco portrays the "Scene in Rabat" used on the larger 1, 2 and 3-centimes issues of 1918-24.

Portraits of President Roosevelt and President Arroyo of Ecuador and a picture of the White House in Washington will appear on a new set of eight stamps to be issued early in November by Ecuador, according to J. & H. Stolow, New York wholesalers. The same firm reports that Germany has issued a new set of 12 semi-postals, Belgium two Winterhelp issues both of 10fr plus 20fr in value but in different colors, and Monaco a new set of 15 values bearing the portrait of Prince Louis II. Other new issues reported by Stolow's include: San Marino, 10 values bearing the coat of arms of that country and Croatia, a new Juventute issue of two stamps.

Memo for first day cover collectors: future first day sales dates of the United States five-cent stamps honoring Axis-overrun countries are: November 9, Albania; November 23, Austria; December 7, Denmark. Covers for first day cancellations should be sent to the Postmaster, Washington 13, D. C.

Hollywood Gossip

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Bette Davis is back on the sound stages, throwing herself energetically into the business of acting like the good trouper she is.

She has been away eight months, most of the time at her farm near Sugar Hill, New Hampshire. Since she left, she has been widowed by the death of Arthur Farnsworth, but her sets are open to visitors as always—with the one request, undramatized, that the subject of her bereavement not be brought up.

Her new picture is "Mr. Skeffington," from the novel by "Elizabeth." It's a meaty part for her, a gamut-running role—but with a decidedly Billie Burke-ish fluttery flavor. Claude Rains plays the title role, the Jewish stockbroker. Young Richard Waring plays the wayward brother, and Walter Abel is the steady, reliable cousin.

THE twin Epstein brothers—Julius J. and Phillip G.—did the screenplay and are co-producers. They have switched the locale from England to New York, kept the characters of the book and built up a plot. It promises to be quite a production, with a shooting schedule of two months. Vincent Sherman is directing.

The first day Bette was on the set, one representing her "home," she made her usual "inspection." Set workers have come to expect it of her. The routine is something like this: "Hmmm," she says, looking around. "Hmmm. I think the flowers would look better on that table. And we'll move that light over here. And, hmmm, those curtains are, well, I guess they're all right. But that awful clock! Who would live with a thing like that in her home?"

After darting around to cover all the nooks and corners, she stops in front of Fred MacLean, the set-dresser, with: "It's a beautiful job, Freddie. Just beautiful. Those few little changes, maybe we'll make them later. Maybe they're not important. But I like it. I like it very much. Now, let's get along with a rehearsal." It's her way of getting acquainted with all her movie "homes."

SO she went into her rehearsal for a 1910 scene of the picture. She is dressed for a ball, and is putting on her jewels at her dressing table. She has lines with Abel and Waring, but her business with the jewels makes her forget them—or perhaps it's merely the excitement of starting a new picture.

"I'm sorry," she says. "I haven't been so jittery in years."

Joan Crawford, newly signed to the Davis lot, hasn't reported yet, but already the wags are playing with the idea of a feud between established queen Bette and new queen Joan.

After Bette has bobbled three times, waggish producer Julius J. Epstein cracks in a loud stage whisper: "Better warm up Crawford!"

Public Urged To Buy, Store and Eat More Warren Co. Spuds

Have you a sack of potatoes in your home?

That's the new patriotic inquiry on the home front today. The answer bears directly on the war effort.

With the national fall crop amounting to 360 million bushels—73 million bushels more than in 1942—it looks like a full dinner pail for the American people at war.

But waste and spoilage and lack of storage space may steal a great deal of food. There have been other bumper crops of foods essential for war. They have been stored for winter and there isn't much space for the storage left for the surprise package of potatoes.

The average family of five normally eats a little less than a bushel of potatoes a month. But there are enough potatoes this year to provide nearly an extra bushel of potatoes each month for every family. Local defense committees over the country are endeavoring to have each family store some potatoes now. For home storage cellars, closets or even a barrel or pit in the back yard, will do. Keep them away from light—light will turn them greenish and make them taste bitter. Don't allow them to freeze as that will spoil them.

In Warren county this year, the potato growers have done yoeman work getting their crop planted and harvested. In addition to the numberless farmers and victory gardeners who grew quantities of potatoes, the Potato Grower's Association has produced a large crop. These are now being graded and sacked under the Grower's Association regulations and sent to market. The Grower's Association in this county planted and harvested 552 acres of potatoes. These have all been grown and sprayed in the most approved manner and are the finest potatoes that can be bought.

Figures given by the Grower's Association show that Oscar Lauger, whose farm is between Youngsville and Chandler's Valley had 140 acres planted and harvested. W. D. Finzer, between North Warren and Russell, had 90 acres; Robert Moore, of Garland, and Frank Dodds, of Columbus, each had 40 acres; John Jensen of Columbus harvested 30 acres; Harry Long, Pittsfield, had 25 acres.

Other members in the county are: Stanley Flatt, 10 acres H. A. Crary, 12 acres; Stanley Ward, 15 acres; Rosecliffe Farm, 10 acres; John Zolka, 10 acres; Carl Spelling, 10 acres; John Allen, 10 acres; Charles Camp and Lloyd Hedges, nine acres each; Homer Gibson, Paul Duntley, Gerald Faulkner, and W. C. Leofsky, eight acres each; O. E. Loper, seven acres; Ray Greenlee, J. D. Upton, Paul Trisket, John Zeb, and Harry Wentzel, six acres each; Nels Anderson, W. M. Hill, H. W. Conarro, Stanley Lawrence and Reider Perrin, five acres each; Fred Martin, three acres.

This is an excellant showing for the Warren County Potato Grower's Association and their products always get the top prices due to their preparation for market. Each year the Association adds new members and it has been demonstrated that potatoes are a good crop in Warren county, due to soil and climactic conditions. Careful handling of the crop has brought a demand for the Association and they are marketed with no trouble.

Every resident of the city is asked to buy and store their potatoes for the season to come. A hall closet can be used for storage, if necessary, so that it is dark and the temperature is between 40 and 60.

Nutritionists place potatoes high on the list of essential foods. But, they have been unjustly accused of being unusually fattening and thus get in the bad graces of the women who desire to retain their girlish figure. "Tain't necessarily so." Let's compare. A medium potato contains 100 calories. A pat of butter (remember butter)? contains about the same, so would two slices of bacon. A pound of potatoes hides about 385 calories, but, a pound loaf of white bread contains 1185 calories.

So store your potatoes now, before they are put in storage and the extra cost of handling causes prices to rise. What's cheaper or better food than the good old reliable spud?

READING & WRITING

BY Edwin Seaver AND Robin M'Kown

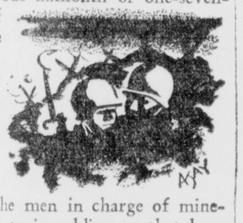
"BATTLES are like marriages. They have a certain fundamental experience they share in common; they differ infinitely but still they are all alike."

CAPT. RALPH INGERSOLL

"The Battle is the Pay-Off," by Captain Ralph Ingersoll tells the story of one battle in Africa which the author witnessed in the capacity of officer-observer. Through his description of this one battle, however, Captain Ingersoll makes vividly clear how a modern army operates, how soldiers are trained and how that training takes effect under fire, how a battle is planned, carried out and won.

"The Battle is the Pay-Off" is a November selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club. The Army thinks so highly of it that they have ordered a special edition of 75,000 copies for distribution among our fighting men. It has also been running currently in the Infantry Journal.

Up until about a year ago, Ralph Ingersoll, the author, was editor of the New York newspaper PM. Then he enlisted in the Army as a private. The first lesson he had to learn, he says, was that he was no longer Ralph Ingersoll, editor, but one-four-millionth or one-seven-millionth or one-eight-millionth part of the Army of the United States—for the duration.



Captain Ingersoll in his book tells how each unit of the Army functions. The business of surviving and moving itself from one place to another is ninety per cent of the Army's business, he points out. The combat engineers who go ahead to find and test water have a vital role. So do the men in charge of mine-detecting. The same is true of those who train soldiers so that long marches and nights of sleeping outdoors are no undue hardship; and of the medical corps who take efficient care of the battle wounded.

There have been many books on individual heroism in battle. "The Battle is the Pay-Off" is the first book to make the Army as a whole the hero.

* * *

The French Foreign Legion has a tradition that it must never surrender as long as arms hold out. Captain Ingersoll tells how one Foreign Legion post, sympathetic to the Americans, saved their honor and at the same time avoided fighting. When scouts reported the advance of the Americans, the Lieutenant in charge of the Post ordered that all weapons be thrown in the well. With no arms, he figured, he could honorably surrender.

TWO NAZI SPIES DIE BEFORE FRENCH FIRING SQUAD

These dramatic pictures show the end of the careers of two enemy agents, trained in German espionage and sabotage schools before being sent to work in Syria and the Levant States. Caught and tried at Aleppo by the Fighting French, they confessed planning to poison Allied soldiers, to blow up power plants and reservoirs, and to get information about a refuge army.

The scene at upper left, shortly after dawn, shows guards leading the condemned men to stakes in front of two firing squads. In each squad of 12 soldiers, half of the rifles are loaded with live ammunition, the other six with blanks; and none of the soldiers knows whether he is about to help kill a man.

The saber flashes down (upper right) and 24 soldiers pull their triggers. As the slugs strike their bodies, one of the spies slumps to the ground. Bullets have sheered off the post behind the taller spy, and his body remains upright, held to the stump by the bonds.

The coup de grace—a shot in the head of each victim—has been administered by two noncoms with revolvers, and in picture at lower right, soldiers are starting to remove one of the bodies. Military ustice has been satisfied . . . A staff photographer and correspondent of YANK, the Army weekly, drove 1600 miles across a dessert and mountains to get this remarkable series of pictures.

Chapter 14

SALLY held on to the tourniquet so tightly her fingers were numb. She reached over to feel the pulse of the other injured man. It was very weak. They both needed expert medical care. But she couldn't leave them long enough to get help. Someone in the crowd would have to phone for an ambulance. She looked up at the throng pressing around her curiously.

"Will someone call Emergency Hospital—quickly. Tell them to send an ambulance at once."

A woman across from her said, "I'll go," and rushed off.

Sally looked up, rivulets of rain dripping down her face. "Two, quite badly. That woman is suffering mostly from shock, I imagine." She nodded at the woman, who was sitting up, wiping her face.

"Are you a nurse?" The officer looked curiously at Sally, kneeling on the wet aisle. Her hair was stringing down her face, her skirt was sodden.

"Nurse's Aide," Sally said briefly. "Officer, don't let any of these people get that man up." She indicated the workman who had just opened his eyes. "That's the worst thing anybody can do, if he has a concussion."

"I guess you know more about it than I do. You just park here for a while, and I'll get an ambulance."

"We've already phoned Emergency for one," Sally told him.

WHEN the long familiar ambulance marked Emergency Hospital came charging up F Street, Sally drew a sigh of relief. The ten minutes she'd been on the scene seemed like years, so weighed down had she been with responsibility for the injured. Every muscle in her body ached from the stooping position she'd been in. As the white-coated doctor swung off the back steps of the ambulance and strode through the crowd, Sally was amazed to see it was Peter. He had come himself. He grinned when he saw her. "Hello, Miss Scarecrow. So you're the efficient gal they told me about."

His firm hand closed over hers for an instant as he took hold of the tourniquet. Sally laughed shakily. "I've never been so glad to see anyone. I'm afraid this man has some other injury, Peter. But at least the bleeding is stopped." She stood up, her knees shaking, her back stabbed with tiny jets of pain. The ordeal was over. At last responsibility for the injured was resting on the shoulders of an expert, not a green Nurse's Aide.

Peter's look was approving as he helped the ambulance driver lift the injured man on the stretcher. "You've done a swell job, baby. Have to see you get a Carnegie medal for this. Now mind the doctor, and go home. Take a hot bath and a sizzling lemonade and get right to bed. I don't want you to catch pneumonia to add to my chores."

He hailed a taxi driver in the crowd. "Here, take this lady home and step on it. I'll call you tomorrow and tell you how your patients are. Bye."

Sally could hear the ambulance clanging down the street as her taxi turned the corner. Now that the strain was over and she was safely on her way home, it seemed unbelievable that she had actually given first aid to an injured man. Why, even in the weeks she'd been on duty at Emergency, she had never had a chance to use her first aid knowledge. She wondered now how she had ever managed to fix a tourniquet so fast.

WITH the crisis a thing of the past, Sally realized her teeth were chattering—from nerves and from cold. She was soaked through. Her shoes were sodden, her jacket saturated. She regarded the new print dress sadly. It would probably shrink to nothing after the exposure.

As the taxi drew up in front of the rooming house, Sally reached into her wet pocketbook for the fare. But the driver shook his head. "This is on me, lady. After the way you fixed up that man back there, I guess you deserve a free ride. The way the world goes you probably won't get any thanks from that guy, whoever he is, but I'll take my hat off to you. As slick a job as I ever saw." He waved and drove off.

Walking up the rooming house stairs, Sally felt suddenly limp. The bathroom door was open, and before she went into her room, she turned on the hot water in the tub and pulled off her wet shoes and stockings. Now that she had priorities on the use of the bathroom, she went into her room for her flannel housecoat. As she opened the door, her three roommates with one accord gasped. "Did you fall in the Potomac?" Dippy inquired.

Sally was shedding her clothes as fast as she could pull them off. The print dress, already out of shape, stuck as she tried to yank it over her shoulders. "Here, give me a hand," she choked, the dress over her face. Frances pulled hard. Sally emerged red-faced on the other side. "I'll tell you all about it after I have a bath. I'm supposed to drink a hot lemonade, but there aren't any lemons."

Meg was fishing around in her dresser drawer. She pulled out a flat bottle. "You need something stronger than lemonade, from the looks of you. Here, take a swallow." Sally was going to protest, but thought better of it as another chill rocked her. She shut her eyes and swallowed. The brandy burned her throat, but instantly began to warm her.

THE others were kidding Meg. "So you've been holding out on us, Meg. How long has that been there?"

"Brandy is an essential in any medicine cabinet," Meg said primly, and the three howled.

The brandy plus the steaming bath completely dispelled the chills. Sally tied the warm housecoat tightly around her, and got into bed. Then she told her impatient roommates the story.

Dippy summed up their recation. "Our little Sally," she said, shaking her head. "The town certainly hasn't been the same since you landed here. I don't know whether I like rooming with such a notorious character. She gets a swell job and a raise a few weeks after she gets inside the War Commission, hooks herself a doctor right off the bat, and then has to do a Florence Nightingale right in the middle of F Street! My soul!"

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Chapter 15

KNOCK, knock, knock, The insistent pounding on the door woke Sally from sleep so deep she didn't even know where she was when she woke up. Then she remembered. After the strain of the accident yesterday, no wonder she was sleeping so hard Evidently her roommates had gone to work without waking her up. She staggered to the door

The landlady, a grim-featured woman who always wore a dirty apron, stood there holding out a paper She thrust it at Sally accusingly "Is this you?"

There, spread across the bottom of the front page, was a four-column headline. "Government Worker Saves Diplomat's Life." Sally stared at it, fascinated. There was a picture of the accident car, with a white arrow pointing to the safety aisle. Bold type underneath announced that Sally Thayer, War Commission secretary, had saved the life of Serge Vihjalmur, representative of the Polish government-in-exile, by improvising a tourniquet. "Sally Thayer, typical government war worker, wakes up today to find herself a heroine," the story began.

Sally looked dazedly at the landlady. "If you're this girl," the woman said, sounding as displeased as though Sally had a criminal record, "there's a couple of reporter fellows downstairs. And I don't want them sitting around my house." She dropped the paper inside the room, and banged the door shut

IT WAS all too much for Sally. Last night's events were unreal enough, without having the injured man turn into a celebrity. Reporters downstairs. Maybe photographers. Sally groaned.

She started to dress for the session with the newsmen downstairs. She couldn't find her earrings. Twice she dropped her lipstick on the floor. She was all dressed when she discovered her stockings didn't match.

She had walked three steps down the stairs, when there was a sudden rush below and the hall swarmed with men. Immediately dazzling light bathed Sally in white brilliance as flash bulbs popped. "Right there! Hold it! Now come down a few steps!"

Sally stood it for a second, then crumpled up on the stairs, her face in her arms. There was an embarrassed silence. Then one man came up the stairs, his hat in his hand. "I'm sorry, Miss Thayer. We didn't mean to upset you. But after the swell thing you did last night, naturally the boys want to have a picture. We've already gotten a shot of the doctor at Emergency, but of course you're the star. Let's start all over again." His voice was friendly; he put an arm beneath her elbow. "Why not come down here and just tell us how you felt all through it. Then the boys will take a couple of pictures—good ones—and it will all be over."

Somehow she got through it. She tried to tell them what had happened, but she made it sound so simple. Anyone who knew first aid would have done what she did. The reporters disagreed. So they shot questions right and left. Finally she was rescued by the same man. "OK, let's call it a day. Miss Thayer probably wants to get some breakfast." He turned to Sally. "How about it? Let's go round the corner and relax over some good coffee."

SOMEONE grabbed his arm. "No, you don't, Bob. We'll all take Miss Thayer to breakfast, thank you. Get your hat, Miss Thayer."

Pedestrians stared at them as they swarmed over the sidewalk, six men and one young girl in a navy blue dress with a white pique collar and round sailor hat with blue streamers. They tramped into a cafe on Connecticut Avenue that Sally had always avoided because it looked tough. It proved to have the best coffee cake she had ever eaten. Sally sat on a stool. The rest stood up around her.

Sally had almost forgotten she had a job. She looked at her watch. "Good heavens! My boss has a big session at 10 and here I am. I've got to tear. Thank you so much for my breakfast." Before they knew what was going on, she'd rushed out the door and down the street.

Sally dreaded every step of the way to her office in the War Commission—now that she knew what was spread all over the front page. But evidently she was still anonymous here. There were always such crowds in the elevators that your features were slightly mashed while you rode up. She slipped thankfully into the third-floor office and stopped short. A huge vase of dark red roses stood on her desk. The white card beside it said simply, "Don't let all this go to your head. It's routine prescription in cases of this kind."

Sally stood smiling down at the card. Peter. What a nice guy he was. Simultaneously with her thoughts the telephone rang. Peter's voice on the wire was unmistakable. "Gosh, you have to knock off work for the morning to get hold of someone up at your shop. I've had two wrong extensions."

"JUST my low-down way of getting back in your good graces. I've meant to call you since that first evening, when you finally spoke to me in a friendly way. But I've been up to my ears. Now that you're a heroine, I think I'd like to know you better." Peter had a disarming way of stating the other person's reaction before he had time to do it himself. Sally had wondered why Peter hadn't repeated his first invitation—especially since he had seemed to enjoy himself as much as she had.

"I thought you'd like to know you were right on that concussion. If any well-meaning soul had moved that guy, he might be in the other world now. And now, what are you doing tonight?"

Sally started to say "nothing," till she remembered the USO dance. Her heart sank. "Oh, Peter, I'm so sorry. I'm supposed to go up to Fort Meade."

"Putting me in competition with the Army, are you? Well, in that case, since for the first time in six months I'm not on duty Sunday, I'll come around and you can tell me all about the soldier boys. How about saving your appetite for a fancy breakfast around twelve?"

"I'd love to. And thank you so much for the flowers, Peter. I feel like a glamour girl, anyway."

"You don't do badly at all. See you tomorrow. Be good."

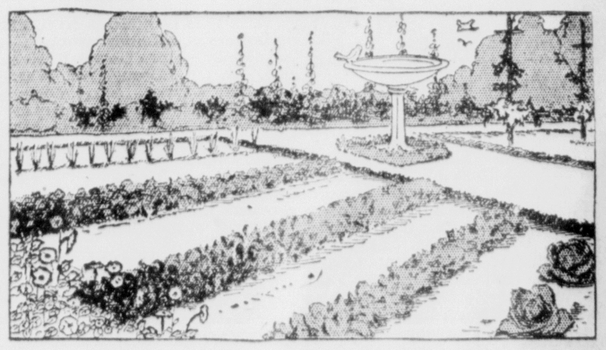
Fall Sown Flowers for Victory Garden Borders



Victory Gardens May Be Beautiful.

A fashion for decorating Victory gardens with flower borders began to spread last summer, and such beautiful effects were achieved that the practice is sure to increase.

Unless the flowers are confined to narrow ribbons along paths and boundaries in which dwarf bedding types can be used, the best flowers to grow alongside vegetables are those which are tall and stay upright, where they will not interfere with cultivating.

These are also the flowers for cutting, and not only will decorate the garden but also provide blossoms for bowl and vase arrangements in the house.

Many of these annuals can be sown this fall, after the Victory garden plot has been cleaned up and spaded for next spring's planting.

Centaureas, which include excellent red, white and blue varieties, will winter safely even if they come up from seed this fall. The same is true of annual larkspur, indispensable for cutting. Both had best be sown this fall to get an early start next spring.

Other annuals that can be sown now are all the various members of the poppy tribe, petunias, snapdragons, alyssum, nicotina (the flowering tobacco), gypsophila, Chinese forget-me-nots, calendulas and hosts of others. The tender annuals, such as marigolds and zinnias, should be held until spring, although occasionally marigolds self-sow.

Snapdragons which have bloomed this summer may be cut back and given a protective cover and come through for early bloom next spring. Experiment has shown that the California wax paper cloches will bring the snaps through the winter in fine shape. The cloche should have a small ventilating slit cut in its side.

The one factor in fall seed sowing to be attended to is mulch. Heavy rains will wash the seeds out of their regular rows unless a protection against the driving showers is given. Leaves, straw or stalks of the flower garden will give ample protection. If the seeds can be sown in a seed bed for transplanting in the spring, a wooden curb about the bed to prevent the washing of heavy rains is advisable.

READING & WRITING

BY Edwin Seaver AND Robin McKown

"BATTLES are like marriages. They have a certain fundamental experience they share in common; they differ infinitely but still they are all alike."

CAPT. RALPH INGERSOLL

"The Battle is the Pay-Off," by Captain Ralph Ingersoll tells the story of one battle in Africa which the author witnessed in the capacity of officer-observer. Through his description of this one battle, however, Captain Ingersoll makes vividly clear how a modern army operates, how soldiers are trained and how that training takes effect under fire, how a battle is planned, carried out and won.

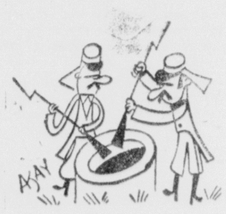
"The Battle is the Pay-Off" is a November selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club. The Army thinks so highly of it that they have ordered a special edition of 75,000 copies for distribution among our fighting men. It has also been running currently in the Infantry Journal.

Up until about a year ago, Ralph Ingersoll, the author, was editor of the New York newspaper PM. Then he enlisted in the Army as a private. The first lesson he had to learn, he says, was that he was no longer Ralph Ingersoll, editor, but one-four-millionth or one-seven-millionth or one-eight-millionth part of the Army of the United States—for the duration.

Captain Ingersoll in his book tells how each unit of the Army functions. The business of surviving and moving itself from one place to another is ninety per cent of the Army's business, he points out. The combat engineers who go ahead to find and test water have a vital role. So do the men in charge of mine-detecting. The same is true of those who train soldiers so that long marches and nights of sleeping outdoors are no undue hardship; and of the medical corps who take efficient care of the battle wounded.

There have been many books on individual heroism in battle. "The Battle is the Pay-Off" is the first book to make the Army as a whole the hero.

* * *



The French Foreign Legion has a tradition that it must never surrender as long as arms hold out. Captain Ingersoll tells how one Foreign Legion post, sympathetic to the Americans, saved their honor and at the same time avoided fighting. When scouts reported the advance of the Americans, the Lieutenant in charge of the Post ordered that all weapons be thrown in the well. With no arms, he figured, he could honorably surrender.

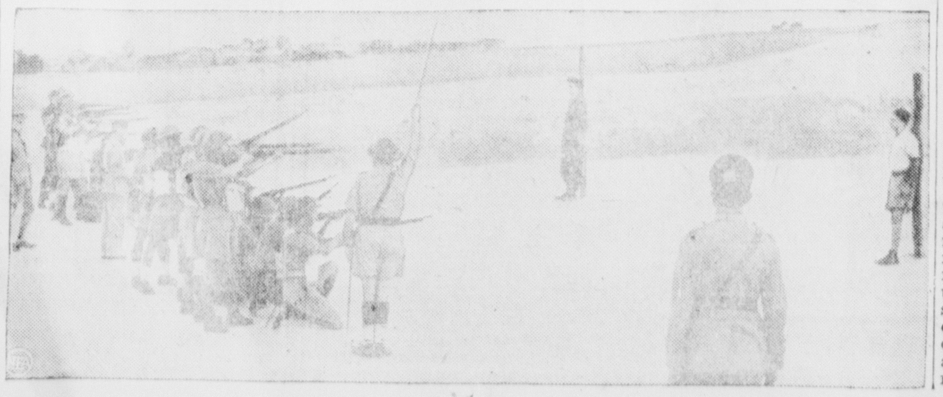
TWO NAZI SPIES DIE BEFORE FRENCH FIRING SQUAD



These dramatic pictures show the end of the careers of two enemy agents, trained in German espionage and sabotage schools before being sent to work in Syria and the Levant States. Caught and tried at Aleppo by the Fighting French, they confessed planning to poison Allied soldiers, to blow up power plants and reservoirs, and to get information about a refuge army.

The scene at upper left, shortly after dawn, shows guards leading the condemned men to stakes in front of two firing squads. In each squad of 12 soldiers, half of the rifles are loaded with live ammunition, the other six with blanks; and none of the soldiers knows whether he is about to help kill a man.

The saber flashes down (upper right) and 24 soldiers pull their triggers. As the slugs strike their bodies, one of the spies slumps to the ground. Bullets have sheered off the post behind the taller spy, and his body remains upright, held to the stump by the bonds.

The coup de grace—a shot in the head of each victim—has been administered by two noncoms with revolvers, and in picture at lower right, soldiers are starting to remove one of the bodies. Military ustice has been satisfied . . . A staff photographer and correspondent of YANK, the Army weekly, drove 1600 miles across a dessert and mountains to get this remarkable series of pictures.

Chapter 14

SALLY held on to the tourniquet so tightly her fingers were numb. She reached over to feel the pulse of the other injured man. It was very weak. They both needed expert medical care. But she couldn't leave them long enough to get help. Someone in the crowd would have to phone for an ambulance. She looked up at the throng pressing around her curiously.

"Will someone call Emergency Hospital—quickly. Tell them to send an ambulance at once."

A woman across from her said, "I'll go," and rushed off.

Sally looked up, rivulets of rain dripping down her face. "Two, quite badly. That woman is suffering mostly from shock, I imagine." She nodded at the woman, who was sitting up, wiping her face.

"Are you a nurse?" The officer looked curiously at Sally, kneeling on the wet aisle. Her hair was stringing down her face, her skirt was sodden.

"Nurse's Aide," Sally said briefly. "Officer, don't let any of these people get that man up." She indicated the workman who had just opened his eyes. "That's the worst thing anybody can do, if he has a concussion."

"I guess you know more about it than I do. You just park here for a while, and I'll get an ambulance."

"We've already phoned Emergency for one," Sally told him.

WHEN the long familiar ambulance marked Emergency Hospital came charging up F Street, Sally drew a sigh of relief. The ten minutes she'd been on the scene seemed like years, so weighed down had she been with responsibility for the injured. Every muscle in her body ached from the stooping position she'd been in. As the white-coated doctor swung off the back steps of the ambulance and strode through the crowd. Sally was amazed to see it was Peter. He had come himself. He grinned when he saw her. "Hello, Miss Scarecrow. So you're the efficient gal they told me about."

His firm hand closed over hers for an instant as he took hold of the tourniquet. Sally laughed shakily. "I've never been so glad to see anyone. I'm afraid this man has some other injury, Peter. But at least the bleeding is stopped." She stood up, her knees shaking, her back stabbed with tiny jets of pain. The ordeal was over. At last responsibility for the injured was resting on the shoulders of an expert, not a green Nurse's Aide.

Peter's look was approving as he helped the ambulance driver lift the injured man on the stretcher. "You've done a swell job, baby. Have to see you get a Carnegie medal for this. Now mind the doctor, and go home. Take a hot bath and a sizzling lemonade and get right to bed. I don't want you to catch pneumonia to add to my chores."

He hailed a taxi driver in the crowd. "Here, take this lady home and step on it. I'll call you tomorrow and tell you how your patients are. Bye."

Sally could hear the ambulance clanging down the street as her taxi turned the corner. Now that the strain was over and she was safely on her way home, it seemed unbelievable that she had actually given first aid to an injured man. Why, even in the weeks she'd been on duty at Emergency, she had never had a chance to use her first aid knowledge. She wondered now how she had ever managed to fix a tourniquet so fast.

WITH the crisis a thing of the past, Sally realized her teeth were chattering—from nerves and from cold. She was soaked through. Her shoes were sodden, her jacket saturated. She regarded the new print dress sadly. It would probably shrink to nothing after the exposure.

As the taxi drew up in front of the rooming house, Sally reached into her wet pocketbook for the fare. But the driver shook his head. "This is on me, lady. After the way you fixed up that man back there, I guess you deserve a free ride. The way the world goes you probably won't get any thanks from that guy, whoever he is, but I'll take my hat off to you. As slick a job as I ever saw." He waved and drove off.

Walking up the rooming house stairs, Sally felt suddenly limp. The bathroom door was open, and before she went into her room, she turned on the hot water in the tub and pulled off her wet shoes and stockings. Now that she had priorities on the use of the bathroom, she went into her room for her flannel housecoat. As she opened the door, her three roommates with one accord gasped. "Did you fall in the Potomac?" Dippy inquired.

Sally was shedding her clothes as fast as she could pull them off. The print dress, already out of shape, stuck as she tried to yank it over her shoulders. "Here, give me a hand," she choked, the dress over her face. Frances pulled hard. Sally emerged red-faced on the other side. "I'll tell you all about it after I have a bath. I'm supposed to drink a hot lemonade, but there aren't any lemons."

Meg was fishing around in her dresser drawer. She pulled out a flat bottle. "You need something stronger than lemonade, from the looks of you. Here, take a swallow." Sally was going to protest, but thought better of it as another chill rocked her. She shut her eyes and swallowed. The brandy burned her throat, but instantly began to warm her.

THE others were kidding Meg. "So you've been holding out on us, Meg. How long has that been there?"

"Brandy is an essential in any medicine cabinet," Meg said primly, and the three howled.

The brandy plus the steaming bath completely dispelled the chills. Sally tied the warm housecoat tightly around her, and got into bed. Then she told her impatient roommates the story.

Dippy summed up their reaction. "Our little Sally," she said, shaking her head. "The town certainly hasn't been the same since you landed here. I don't know whether I like rooming with such a notorious character. She gets a swell job and a raise a few weeks after she gets inside the War Commission, hooks herself a doctor right off the bat, and then has to do a Florence Nightingale right in the middle of F Street! My soul!"

Chapter 15

KNOCK, knock, knock, The insistent pounding on the door woke Sally from sleep so deep she didn't even know where she was when she woke up. Then she remembered. After the strain of the accident yesterday, no wonder she was sleeping so hard Evidently her roommates had gone to work without waking her up. She staggered to the door

The landlady, a grim-featured woman who always wore a dirty apron, stood there holding out a paper She thrust it at Sally accusingly "Is this you?"

There, spread across the bottom of the front page, was a four-column headline. "Government Worker Saves Diplomat's Life." Sally stared at it, fascinated. There was a picture of the accident car, with a white arrow pointing to the safety aisle. Bold type underneath announced that Sally Thayer, War Commission secretary, had saved the life of Serge Vinjalmur, representative of the Polish government-in-exile, by improvising a tourniquet. "Sally Thayer, typical government war worker, wakes up today to find herself a heroine," the story began.

Sally looked dazedly at the landlady. "If you're this girl," the woman said, sounding as displeased as though Sally had a criminal record, "there's a couple of reporter fellows downstairs. And I don't want them sitting around my house." She dropped the paper inside the room, and banged the door shut

IT WAS all too much for Sally. Last night's events were unreal enough, without having the injured man turn into a celebrity. Reporters downstairs. Maybe photographers. Sally groaned.

She started to dress for the session with the newsmen downstairs. Twice she dropped her lipstick on the floor. She was all dressed when she discovered her stockings didn't match.

She had walked three steps down the stairs, when there was a sudden rush below and the hall swarmed with men. Immediately dazzling light bathed Sally in white brilliance as flash bulbs popped. "Right there! Hold it! Now come down a few steps!"

Sally stood it for a second, then crumpled up on the stairs, her face in her arms. There was an embarrassed silence. Then one man came up the stairs, his hat in his hand. "I'm sorry, Miss Thayer. We didn't mean to upset you. But after the swell thing you did last night, naturally the boys want to have a picture. We've already gotten a shot of the doctor at Emergency, but of course you're the star. Let's start all over again." His voice was friendly; he put an arm beneath her elbow. "Why not come down here and just tell us how you felt all through it. Then the boys will take a couple of pictures—good ones—and it will all be over."

Somehow she got through it. She tried to tell them what had happened, but she made it sound so simple. Anyone who knew first aid would have done what she did. The reporters disagreed. So they shot questions right and left. Finally she was rescued by the same man. "OK, let's call it a day. Miss Thayer probably wants to get some breakfast." He turned to Sally. "How about it? Let's go round the corner and relax over some good coffee."

SOMEONE grabbed his arm. "No, you don't, Bob. We'll all take Miss Thayer to breakfast, thank you. Get your hat, Miss Thayer."

Pedestrians stared at them as they swarmed over the sidewalk, six men and one young girl in a navy blue dress with a white pique collar and round sailor hat with blue streamers. They tramped into a cafe on Connecticut Avenue that Sally had always avoided because it looked tough. It proved to have the best coffee cake she had ever eaten. Sally sat on a stool. The rest stood up around her.

Sally had almost forgotten she had a job. She looked at her watch. "Good heavens! My boss has a big session at 10 and here I am. I've got to tear. Thank you so much for my breakfast." Before they knew what was going on, she'd rushed out the door and down the street.

Sally dreaded every step of the way to her office in the War Commission—now that she knew what was spread all over the front page. But evidently she was still anonymous here. There were always such crowds in the elevators that your features were slightly mashed while you rode up. She slipped thankfully into the third-floor office and stopped short. A huge vase of dark red roses stood on her desk. The white card beside it said simply, "Don't let all this go to your head. It's routine prescription in cases of this kind."

Sally stood smiling down at the card. Peter. What a nice guy he was. Simultaneously with her thoughts the telephone rang. Peter's voice on the wire was unmistakable. "Gosh, you have to knock off work for the morning to get hold of someone up at your shop. I've had two wrong extensions."

"Peter, they're beautiful." Sally's voice was breathless.

"JUST my low-down way of getting back in your good graces. I've meant to call you since that first evening, when you finally spoke to me in a friendly way. But I've been up to my ears. Now that you're a heroine, I think I'd like to know you better." Peter had a disarming way of stating the other person's reaction before he had time to do it himself. Sally had wondered why Peter hadn't repeated his first invitation—especially since he had seemed to enjoy himself as much as she had.

"I thought you'd like to know you were right on that concussion. If any well-meaning soul had moved that guy, he might be in the other world now. And now, what are you doing tonight?"

Sally started to say "nothing," till she remembered the USO dance. Her heart sank. "Oh, Peter, I'm so sorry. I'm supposed to go up to Fort Meade."

"Putting me in competition with the Army, are you? Well, in that case, since for the first time in six months I'm not on duty Sunday, I'll come around and you can tell me all about the soldier boys. How about saving your appetite for a fancy breakfast around twelve?"

"I'd love to. And thank you so much for the flowers, Peter. I feel like a glamour girl, anyway."

"You don't do badly at all. See you tomorrow. Be good."

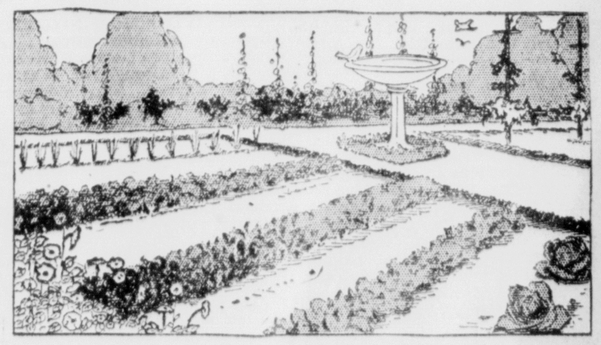
Fall Sown Flowers for Victory Garden Borders



Victory Gardens May Be Beautiful.

A fashion for decorating Victory gardens with flower borders began to spread last summer, and such beautiful effects were achieved that the practice is sure to increase.

Unless the flowers are confined to narrow ribbons along paths and boundaries in which dwarf bedding types can be used, the best flowers to grow alongside vegetables are those which are tall and stay upright, where they will not interfere with cultivating.

These are also the flowers for cutting, and not only will decorate the garden but also provide blossoms for bowl and vase arrangements in the house.

Many of these annuals can be sown this fall, after the Victory garden plot has been cleaned up and spaded for next spring's planting.

Centaureas, which include excellent red, white and blue varieties, will winter safely even if they come up from seed this fall. The same is true of annual larkspur, indispensable for cutting. Both had best be sown this fall to get an early start next spring.

Other annuals that can be sown now are all the various members of the poppy tribe, petunias, snapdragons, alyssum, nicotina (the flowering tobacco), gypsophila, Chinese forget-me-nots, calendulas and hosts of others. The tender annuals, such as marigolds and zinnias, should be held until spring, although occasionally marigolds self-sow.

Snapdragons which have bloomed this summer may be cut back and given a protective cover and come through for early bloom next spring. Experiment has shown that the California wax paper cloches will bring the snaps through the winter in fine shape. The cloche should have a small ventilating slit cut in its side.

The one factor in fall seed sowing to be attended to is mulch. Heavy rains will wash the seeds out of their regular rows unless a protection against the driving showers is given. Leaves, straw or stalks of the flower garden will give ample protection. If the seeds can be sown in a seed bed for transplanting in the spring, a wooden curb about the bed to prevent the washing of heavy rains is advisable.

Cardinal Outfielder Receives Coveted Honor As Present On 23rd Birthday Anniversary

BY TED MEIER

New York, Nov. 3—(AP)—Stan Musial, the Donora, Pa., outfielder who batted .357 for the championship St. Louis Cardinals during the past season, got a birthday present today—he was named the National League's most valuable player for 1943.

The present arrived a couple of weeks early, but alhough Stan will not celebrate his 23rd natal day until Nov. 21, there's no doubt that he and Mrs. Musial appreciated the selection made by a committee of the Baseball Writers' Association.

Out of a possible 336 points the National League batting champion received a total of 267, getting 13 of 24 first place votes.

Runnerup to Musial was his teammate, Catcher Walker Cooper, soon to be inducted into the army, who received five first place votes and a point total of 192.

Big Bill Nicholson, of the Chicago Cubs, who socked the most homers, 28, and drove in the most runs, 128, was third with 181 points.

Rounding out the top six were Billy Herman, Brooklyn second baseman who was runnerup to Musial in the batting race and to Nicholson in the BBI column; Mort Cooper, Cardinal pitcher, who received the 1942 award; and Truett "Rip" Sewell, Pittsburgh righthander who gained fame with his tantalizing slow ball. Herman received 140 points, Cooper 130 and Sewell 127.

Musial's clouting sparked the Cards to their second straight pennant. He went to bat 617 times and socked out 220 hits for the highest average in the senior loop in six years. In addition he led in doubles with 47 and triples with 20 and was runnerup in runs scored with 108.

Weekly Poll Places Purdue In Second Place In Voting

BY HAROLD CLAASSEN

New York, Nov. 3—(AP)—Purdue climbed to second place behind Notre Dame in the weekly Associated Press poll today following a weekend in which Army and Navy, erstwhile threats to Irish prestige, were unable to maintain the pace.

Notre Dame again monopolized the first place votes, getting 97 of a possible 101. The remaining four were divided equally by Pennsylvania and Southern California.

The Boilermakers cross state neighbors of the South Bend outfit, shot to second from fourth a week ago by drubbing Wisconsin, 32 to 0, while Navy was humiliated by the Irish, 33 to 6, and Army was held to a 13 to 13 tie by Pennsylvania.

Navy skidded all the way from third to seventh with the unbeaten, untied and unscored on Trojans of Southern California grabbing fourth behind Army. Pennsylvania is fifth best in the opinion of the typewriter experts with Iowa Pre-Flight, Michigan, Duke and College of Pacific filing out the top ten.

Purdue, spearheaded by Tony Butkovich and a horde of other naval trainee athletes, has pounded through seven foes without defeat this season.

HUGH FULLARTON, JR. By

New York, Nov. 3—(AP)—For some time boxing men have been arguing that their favorite sport will enjoy a post-war boom as a result of the fistic training service men have received...now comes the first real evidence we've seen backing up their speculations...Tech. Sgt. Jim G. Lucas, a marine combat correspondent from Tulsa, Okla., sends back a story of how the marines received boxing interest in New Zealand during their stay there...they stirred up so much fan and participant interest that Capt. C. L. Mullany, chairman of the New Zealand amateur boxing association, presented a loving cup to the C. O. "In appreciation of the splendid spirit and outstanding sportsmanship" shown by the U. S. leatherneck leather flingers..

Cage League At 'Y' Begins Team Picking

Last week the first meeting of the Y.M.C.A. Basketball League committee took place with President Nick Creola in the chair.

Several items of discussion were raised, some were settled and some were tabled for a later date.

One definite thing that resulted was the fixing of the starting date for the league. It will get under way Monday, November 29th.

As things look now, only one team is definitely signed, and that is the O'Connor Machine Co. five. Another independent group is signed tentatively. However, the committee felt that the possibilities for a four and maybe a six team league were good. Those classed as possibilities and waiting to be heard from are: Struthers-Wells; Rock Cleaners; National Forge; and Blomquists, last year's champions. Any other class A combine that would like to play is asked to get in touch with either Nick Creola or Physical Director Parmalee immediately. Rosters of all teams must be presented no later than Friday, November 12th, at which time the committee and team managers will meet to start the league rolling. The rosters can contain no more than ten men and must be permanent.

Physical Director Parmelee is to draw up a constitution to present for consideration at the November 12th meeting.

It was decided tokeep the trophy which has been awarded to the champion team over a period of years and is pretty bad off from wear, at the "Y" and engrave the winner's name on it. In its place the winning team will be the recipients of gold basketballs and the runner-up will receive silver memos. This gives to both teams in the playoffs individual awards

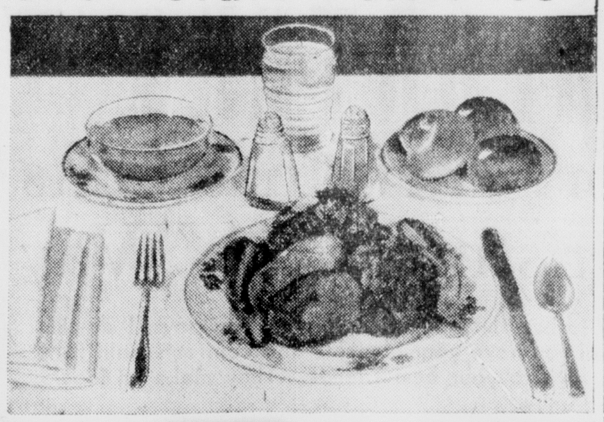
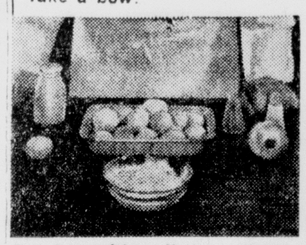
How To Make Potato Pancakes

AP Features

Uncle Sam says use more potatoes. Housewives are urged to buy their spuds by the 100-pound sack, store them carefully and use them often. After you've served them baked, boiled, creamed and fried, you might try potato pancakes as they are prepared by a famous Swiss chef, Hermann Rousch, of New York's Belmont Plaza. Ingredients needed are 2 cups grated raw potatoes, ¼ cup milk, 1 well-beaten egg, 2 tablespoons flour, salt, pepper and 1 tablespoon chopped onions. Now follow Hermann's directions, then sit back and take a bow:





1. Assemble all ingredients and utensils you will need.

3. Add milk at once (to avoid darkening) then drain off.

4. Add other ingredients and enough milk for stiff batter.

2. Grate the raw potatoes and measure out 2 cupsful.

5. Drop by spoonful into well-greased pan, brown.

Strike Three! Japs Out

Climaxing a three-pronged offensive in the Solomons, American forces are now fighting on boggy, mountainous Bourgainville Island, final barrier to Rabaul, after previous amphibious occupational attacks on Mono and then Choiseul. The map traces the paths of these three lightning thrusts, the latest striking north of Cape Torokina on Bougainville.

Free French Forum Opens At Algiers

Algiers, Nov. 3.—(AP)—A demand that Gen. Henri Giraud, commander-in-chief of the French armed forces, publicly renounce all ties with Vichy set the stage for the opening sessions today of the consultative assembly, France's first free political forum since 1940.

The demand was made in a press conference by five pro-DeGaullists, recent arrivals from Nazi-held France, who are attending the assembly as delegates. They declared that the French people recognize De Gaulle as chief of the government and regard Giraud as head of the military forces, but that they believed he should remain as such only if he publicly declared he had completely repudiated the Vichy government.

M'CLOSKEY IS AGAIN LOSER IN JOHNSTOWN

Johnstown, Nov. 3—(AP)—Eddie McCloskey, former Johnstown mayor and onetime state boxing commissioner, was defeated in yesterday's balloting for re-election as Cambria county commissioner, complete returns showed today. He was renominated by the Democrats in the primary without organization support.

His running mate, Commissioner Frank P Holleren, and the Republican incumbent, John Thomas Jr., were re-elected. Another Republican, Cyrus Davis, former sheriff and coroner, became the third member of the commission.

would not work until a contract is signed.

Similarly, a survey of mines employing three-fourths of Alabama's 22,000 miners showed no signs of resumption.

The reports generally reflected a lack of any sort of demonstrations in the fields, where the Stars and Stripes flew over deserted tipples.

Indiana still had 7,000 idle, with no evidence of any action pending word from UMW's policy committee.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and Interior Secretary Ickes, boss of the now government-operated mines, decided on their third meeting within 48 hours to discuss a possible basis for a contract.

The UMW policy committee arranged to hear the results of the parley shortly before noon. This group has the power to call the men back to work.

For the second time this year Mr. Roosevelt ordered the mines seized Monday night.

TRANSPORTATION IN PHILLY IS RESUMED

Philadelphia, Nov. 3—(AP)—Service on Philadelphia trolley and bus lines, disrupted in some sections yesterday by a dispute over a nickel-sized CIO button, returned to normal today in a truce between the CIO and Philadelphia Transportation Company.

Representatives of both sides met for five hours last night and agreed shortly after midnight to place the controversy before the National War Labor Board. The PTC ordered drivers not to wear CIO buttons hile on duty and CIO members, protesting, said the ban infringed on their "constitutional rights."

C.O. Hunger Strike in Pen Unchanged

Lewisburg, Nov. 3—(AP)—The hunger strike of five conscientious objectors at the Lewisburg Federal Penitentiary, now in its second month, today went on without a sign from the prisoners they would soon end their protest against prison inspection of their mail.

"The situation is just the same," declared Warden W. H. Hiatt, "that is all I can tell you."

Asked again who the striking prisoners were, the warden replied: "I can't give out the names."

Federal authorities previously announced the protest will have no effect on prison regulations at Lewisburg. The five men have been tube fed since last week.

CAUSE OF MINE DAMAGE

In a mine explosion, it is not the force of the blast that causes the most damage, but the after-damp, a mixture of gases. From 80 to 90 per cent of the deaths in mine explosions are caused by the after-damp.

PAYING Your Bills the HARD WAY

If you get out the old car and use up precious gas and rubber; or if you have to take a bus and then walk from one place to another, by the time you get through and count all your cost in time and effort, you have actually paid more than the small fee of 7½c per check—the only cost of a ThriftiCheck account, and you have not had the pleasure and prestige of paying your bills with imprinted personalized checks, which you can prepare easily in advance in your home or your office.

What It Means

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE

WASHINGTON—Don't be surprised if you really feel the pinch of merchandise shortages in the coming year.

This year's 90-billion dollar buying spree by a war-prospering population, combined with reduced production of civilian goods, is cutting so heavily into supplies that stocks are nearing depletion in a number of important but unnameable articles. Many shortages have been postponed only because inventories were at record levels shortly after we entered the war.

The public is familiar with the shortage of metal products, their manufacture for civilian use having been stopped or sharply curtailed. Buyers also know about the scarcity of rayon, paper and paper novelties, alcoholic beverages and clothing for a record crop of babies.

Reduction In Supplies

WPB and OPA authorities aren't telling the public about coming shortages in many specific items because they fear such information might touch off waves of panic-buying. A general indicator, however, of the reduction in supplies is the Department of Commerce estimate that stocks of durable home furnishings in department stores declined by $202,000,000 in th year ending last June.

WPB plans to have the production of certain civilian articles stepped up from time to time to meet "minimum essential requirements." The use of more steel was authorized for the manufacture this fall of kitchen utensils, bed springs, cooking stoves, hot water heaters, pins and needles and similar articles. Refrigerators, washing machines and electric irons may be produced in limited amounts during 1944.

More To Disappear

Other articles, however, will disappear from the market as the war goes on. WPB's Office of Civilian Requirements says that, owing to the need of materials in war production, it probably will be impossible to reopen substantial manufacture of many items formerly turned out for civilians.

The manpower shortage is another reason for the reduction in output of civilian goods. Workers are being drawn away from less vital industries into key war plants. For example, the cotton textile industry has had to curtail production although cotton supplies are large. The shift of workers also is hurting the metal goods repair and replacement business.

Distribution Difficult

Distribution of goods from factory to consumer is becoming a tougher problem because of the strain on the country's transportation system. The railroads' capacity for handling shipments is being taxed to the limit. Car shortages have been mounting steadily in recent weeks.

The outlook so far with respect to providing John and Mary Civilian with "goods and services to maintain health, morale and working efficiency" is not alarming. John and Mary can count, however, on finding fewer and fewer goods to buy unless—and until—Germany is knocked out.

The Pennsylvania Parole Board has released 1,180 persons from its supervision to permit their induction into the armed forces. Chairman Henry E. Hill disclosed today that "every possible co-operation" is being given to aid induction of both those on parole and inmates of institutions selected for military duty through selective service.

Winter road conditions in 36 states ran the mileage death rate up 24 per cent higher than the summer toll in the same area in the 1941-42 period.
